Tax Dispute Snags Plan Of Congress To Adjourn

But Doughton Sees Passage in Time to Boost Withholding Levy by October 1

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congress yesterday abandoned a half-hearted effort to quit Washington this week-end, as both Houses took a two-day holiday until Monday.

Officially, delayed conference action on the $4,508,000,000 emergency tax bill was blamed for the hold-over, but there was enough other business to hold Congress in session for days.

Tax conferees, meanwhile, called a special Saturday meeting in an effort to complete the big bill by early next week, but Senator Eugene Millikin (R., Colo.) said it would take a "miracle" to do that.

Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) predicted, however, that "we'll get the bill pretty well over the hump today."

In Time for Tax Boost

Both George and House Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) said that in any event the bill will be passed in plenty of time for increases in individual tax rates to take effect October 1.

Conferees have already agreed on the two big revenue-raising features of the bill—a $2,750,000 increase in individual income taxes and a $1,500,000,000 hike in corporate levies.

Row Over Loophole

What's bogging them down is sharp differences over the highly technical loophole-plugging provisions, with House members mainly holding out for Treasury recommendations and the Senate group standing pat on its own modifications.

Another delaying factor is the still-unresolved excess-profits tax dispute. The House voted to compel the taxing committee to report an excess profits tax this session, but the Senate insisted a retroactive profits levy could wait until next year, pending basic studies by Treasury and staff experts.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) tossed in the sponge early in the day in his drive to adjourn Congress. He

9½-Inch Hailstones Rip Missouri City; Damage $1,500,000

JOPLIN, Mo., Sept. 15 (AP).—A barrage of large hailstones ripped through rooftops and windows causing an estimated $1,500,000 damage early today.

The storm, which lasted about 10 minutes, hit in two waves, and the roar awakened many of this southwest Missouri city's 40,000 inhabitants. Many thought a tornado was sweeping the city.

Representatives of major insurance companies, who made the damage estimate, said roofs of 6500 to 8000 buildings were wrecked or damaged by the hail, some as big as 9½ inches in circumference. Neon signs, awnings and windows were shattered.

House Balks at $290,000 Item

'Hill' Conferees Sharply Split On Civil Defense Fund for D. C.

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

In a bitter, closed-door wrangle, Senate and House conferees last night failed to agree on a compromise civil defense fund for the District.

House members, according to a Senate source, stuck stubbornly to the token House-approved $30,000 for civil defene here. The Senate voted Thursday to allow a $290,000 defense item—the amount the District Commissioners have testified is necessary to start a civil defense program for the city.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young has said $30,000 would be sufficient only for the hire of a full-time defense director and to make paper plans.

The defense item is carried in the 17 billion dollar supplemental appropriations bill.

Conferees will resume consideration of the issue at a 10 a. m. meeting today. It is understood House conferees even balked at a Senate offer to compromise on a $190,000 figure.

Three weeks ago Representative Joe E. Bates (D., Ky.), chairman of the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations, told a reporter he thinks the people of Washington are not vitally interested in civil defense.

The conferees also failed to agree on a fund for continuing operation of child day-care-centers for another year. The House had allowed $30,000 and directed that the centers be closed at the end of this month.

The Senate has voted $100,000 for the current fiscal year in line with earlier legislation which authorized continued operation of the centers for at least three more years.

The multimillion-dollar supply bill also contains numerous other appropriations for the Washington area, among them $2,150,000 to purchase and and prepare plans for the new Washington airport to be located probably in Fairfax County, Va.; and three million dollars to resume work on the Baltimore-Washington parkway.

GE, 2 Unions End Lengthy Wage Dispute

10c Hourly Pay Rise, Other Benefits Set Up In New Agreement

NEW YORK, Sept. 15 (AP).—The General Electric Co. and two unions today ended a lengthy contract struggle marked by strikes, and agreed on contract terms for more than 100,000 workers.

Forty thousand CIO workers have been involved in the walkouts, which the company said hampered war production, including jet engines.

The CIO settlement provided for an average 10-cent hourly wage increase, half of which went into effect July 1; potential cost-of-living pay increases; a $125-a-month pension plan, and insurance benefits. Terms of a separate settlement with an independent union representing almost half the GE workers were not divulged, but were believed similar.

Previous Wages Not Revealed

Previous wage scales of the two unions have not been given out.

Scattered strikes by CIO workers began August 29. Later, a general walkout was called and then rescinded at the Government's request, but GE strikes have continued in some cities.

A CIO union spokesman voiced confidence the strikers would return to work on Monday, although actual signing of the contracts will not take place until later.

Settlement, except on details of pensions and insurance, was reached in New York with the independent United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (UE), claiming to represent 45,000 workers in 46 GE plants.

Agreed On in Washington

The company and the CIO International Union of Electrical Workers (IUE), claiming to represent 60,000 workers in 60 GE plants, reached agreement in Washington. The strikes were in plants represented by this union in Syracuse, N. Y.; Lynn, Mass., and elsewhere.

The GE-CIO agreement called for an average 10-cent hourly wage increase, half of which has been in effect since July 1. Additionally, it called for a cost-of-living wage increase on the pattern set by the CIO Automobile Workers and General Motors.

Denham Said To Be on Way Out of NLRB

Steelman Won't Deny Reports He's Asked Counsel to Resign

By the United Press

Informed Capital sources said last night that Robert N. Denham is on his way out as independent general counsel to the National Labor Relations Board.

Questioned closely on reports that he had asked for Denham's resignation, Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman refused flatly to deny the report.

It was learned, however, that the controversial NLRB counsel had visited Steelman's White House office three or four times this week. Denham was not immediately reachable for confirmation.

Denham's associates said it was "no secret" the board was "disturbed" over the conduct of Taft-Hartley law enforcement cases in court. They admitted President Truman also was disturbed over the matter and knew the full details.

Steelman willingly denied there was "any telephone conversation in which I suggested he resign." But when twice asked the specific question whether Denham had been asked to quit in some other manner, Steelman was mum.

Volcano Erupts, Kills 84, Hurts 35 In Philippines

MANILA, Sept. 15 (AP).—Treacherous Mount Hibok Hibok volcano in the southern Philippines in a sudden outburst killed 84 persons and injured seriously 35 others, the Manila Bulletin reported today.

(The United Press quoted Manila Weather Bureau officials as listing the dead at 59.)

President Elpidio Quirino immediately ordered three naval patrol vessels to Camiguin Island, site of the volcano, to assist in evacuating its 45,000 or more inhabitants if need arises.

Just two years ago Hibok Hibok erupted, from September 1 to 16.

The island is less than 10 miles north of Mindanao at its closest point and about 40 miles north of the port of Cagayan on Mindanao.

For Overpopulated Districts

School Aid Measure Passed By House, Goes to President

The House yesterday passed and sent to President Truman a bill to grant Federal aid for school construction in districts where Government activities have caused swollen enrollments.

In another action, a joint Senate-House conference committee reached agreement last night on a companion measure providing Government funds for school maintenance and operation in the same Federally-impacted areas.

The school construction bill, which also authorizes a survey of school needs throughout the country, carries no actual appropriations. But Thursday the Senate voted $49,500,000 to put it into effect this fiscal year.

Under the construction bill, money would be advanced to districts on a matching basis.

Allocations are based upon enrollment increases over a base period and on whether pupils' parents live or only work on Federal property, or were attracted to the area by Government projects.

Nearby Maryland and Virginia school districts are expected to qualify for the new Government aid.

Funds to carry out this measure, also are contained in the supplemental appropriations bill. For the first year the President asked, and the Senate granted, $23,500,000.

Final Action On 'Red' Bill Seen Monday

Conferees Agree On Compromise; Truman's Course Still Uncertain

A Senate-House conference committee yesterday tentatively agreed on Communist control legislation "tougher" in some respects than the White House-denounced McCarran bill.

A Red "concentration camp" provision added on the floor of the Senate was slightly toned down but conferees picked up registration provisions of the House-passed Wood bill that are rougher on Communists and Communist "fronts."

To these were added the McCarran bill's "criminal conspiracy" section and most of the other far-reaching provisions of the Senate-passed measure, including the Administration's own more-limited security steps.

Although there was no formal vote, conferees said there was a "large area of agreement" on all of these points. Legislative draftsmen were directed to draw up the tentatively approved sections for final voting Monday.

Invokes Secrecy Rule

Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) invoked a secrecy rule on the meeting and told newsmen: "Nothing will be really decided until Monday."

The Capitol, meanwhile, was pretty much divided on whether the President will sign or veto the bill when completed. Administration Democrats, who preponderantly voted for the measure, suggested their "Red internment" addition to the bill might give Mr. Truman an "out" to sign. Others said flatly they didn't see how he could square past jibes at the Mundt-Nixon bill with a signature.

The so-called "concentration camp" feature, which Republicans first insisted collided with the Constitution, was modified to meet their objections in the Senate, and reportedly further modified in conference. In its last conference form, it could be invoked only in case of invasion, insurrection or rebellion, to conform with constitutional habeas corpus guarantees, but one conferee said the net effect would be substantially the same as when the bill passed the Senate.

Provisions picked up from the Wood bill go beyond the McCarran measure in one respect. The McCarran bill would ban Communists from Government jobs. The Wood bill would ban either Communists or members of "front" organizations from Federal employment, and from work in defense plants as well.

Both bills require registration with the Attorney General of all Communists and "front" groups and their officers, but the conferees accepted the Wood bill's terminology.

This collectively defines "Communist Action" and "Communist

Large Majorities In House, Senate Favor Exception In This One Case

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Congress yesterday opened the way for Gen. George C. Marshall to succeed Louis A. Johnson as Secretary of Defense.

By large majorities, both houses took down the legal barrier they had set up only three years ago against a professional soldier moving up to head the military establishment. Marshall now must face Senate confirmation for the post, which debate yesterday indicated he would receive without difficulty.

Under terms of the bill, which was passed by the House 220 to 105 and by the Senate 47 to 21, the professional soldier disability is removed specifically from General Marshall by name. A House amendment, which the Senate accepted, spells out the intent of Congress that its action in Marshall's case should set no precedent and that when Marshall leaves the Pentagon the bars will be up again.

Republicans Assail Plan

Republicans in both houses, in long and stormy debate, attacked what they described as abandonment of civilian control of the Nation's military affairs though, with a single exception, Marshall's ability and personal integrity were not questioned. The single exception was in a speech by Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.), whose own colleagues squirmed under the bitter invective he heaped on Marshall.

The former Chief of Staff and Secretary of State, said Jenner, was a "living lie" who was "not only willing but eager to play the role of front man for traitors." Marshall was, Jenner cried, "an unsuspecting, well-intentioned or a coconspirator in treason," and prior to Pearl Harbor "knew of the steps being taken to trick the American people into a war they would not have entered in any other way."

Marshall was responsible for, Jenner declared, or knew about and didn't prevent, every recent American military and diplomatic defeat from Pearl Harbor to the loss of China to Soviet domination.

Jenner Rebuked

Jenner was rebuked discreetly by Republican Senators Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Morse of Oregon and hotly by Majority Leader Lucas of Illinois. Lucas labeled his personal attack on Marshall "one of the most venomous, diabolical, reprehensible and unfortunate speeches ever made on the floor of the Senate."

In the House, Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.) referred to Marshall as "a catspaw and a pawn" employed by a "frightened" Administration to "bail out some desperate men who are in a hole." Marshall, he declared, had "listened a lot" to Secretary of State Acheson, Ambassador Philip C. Jessup and Owen Lattimore, all of whom have drawn Republican charges of fostering communism in the State Department.

"You are getting a man of world-wide reputation to cover up the bungling of Acheson and this

Holds Draft Statistics Misread

Army Defends Mental Test, Insists Rejection Rate Is Low

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Army yesterday vigorously defended its draft induction standards and its mental qualification test against Selective Service charges that the standards are "too high" and that the draft rejection rate is running "abnormally high."

The Selective Service officials who have been making the charges, an Army spokesman told The Washington Post, simply don't understand their own statistics.

The pre-induction tests are working out fine, the Army holds, and the draft rejection rate is, if anything, lower than the rejection rate of World War II draftees.

All the hullaballoo about the rejection rate, the Army spokesman said, stems from improper interpretation of the Selective Service statistics. Properly interpreted, the statistics demonstrate that the present draft procedure is doing what the Army intended: weeding out the men undesirable for military service.

Nationally, the present draft rejection rate is running at 60 percent, the Army official pointed out. Compare this with the World War II rejection rate of 36 percent, he said, and the present figure looks "abnormally high."

"That's the principal mistake everybody makes," the Army spokesman said. "The two figures cannot be directly compared because they refer to different things.

"The present 60 percent rejection rate refers to the rejection of men between the ages of 19 and 25 who are not married, have no dependents, are not students or veterans, and have not already enlisted in the armed forces. In other words, the 60 percent rejected comes from a small, special segment of the American population.

"The World War II rejection rate of 36 percent refers to the last year of the war when we were calling up men from 18 to 38, including married men, those with dependents, veterans, and even illiterates. There were no enlistments permitted in this period. So the 36 percent refers to a large,

New Overtures From Russia On Korea Now Believed Likely

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Now we shall see what the Kremlin really intends to do about Korea, and we shall see it very soon.

This is the firm conviction of American and other Allied diplomats here in the light of the dramatic landings just south of the thirty-eighth parallel.

The choice now facing the Kremlin, these officials feel sure, is whether (1) to send Soviet troops to reoccupy North Korea, thus risking a still graver crisis with the free world, or (2) to seek a diplomatic deal to end the war without delay.

From the Soviet standpoint there is no time to lose. Authoritative information here is that almost all of North Korea's trained and disciplined forces are committed and threatened with entrapment in the south. The land and sea defenses of North Korea are believed to be comparatively open to U. N. forces.

If the precedent of 18 months ago is followed, it should mean a quick overture through the Soviet U. N. delegation here. For when the Kremlin saw that the Allied airlift had broken the Berlin blockade early last year, it instructed Jacob A. Malik to start the talks with Ambassador Philip C. Jessup which led to a settlement.

Malik and Jessup are both in New York again, and although there has been no hint of an overture from Moscow so far, it would be no surprise to see a Red dove of peace fly out of a Soviet dispatch box before this month has ended.

As long as the Communists were rolling south in Korea, as long as the battle of the beachhead was undecided, Allied officials saw no reason why the Kremlin should make a diplomatic move.

Now that the tide of battle has surged the other way, they expect diplomatic events to happen fast—unless, of course, the Kremlin is content to see its puppet government in North Korea overwhelmed and destroyed.

Policy-makers in Washington and other capitals have never lost sight of the danger that Soviet troops might be standing on the thirty-eighth parallel when Allied troops got there. After all, the Soviet Union once occupied the northern half of Korea under the Japanese surrender terms, while

Acheson Asks German Units In West Army

NEW YORK, Sept. 15 (AP).—Secretary of State Acheson laid before the North Atlantic Council late today a one-package American proposal for the defense of western Europe. It would include use of both American and German military contingents in a single unified force.

Acheson's proposition, which he described as revolutionary in American foreign policy, calls also for a supreme effort by all the other 11 Atlantic Treaty nations to raise and equip their own military contingents for the prospective new international army.

According to information from fully informed diplomatic sources, Acheson went down the line for creation of a command staff to direct the training and organization of the new force. He declared that from its initial stages

'Big Mo' Unlimbers Her 16-Inch Rifles Against Invaders

TOKYO, Sept. 15 (AP).—The "Mighty Mo" unlimbered her 16-inch rifles against the Korean Reds today.

The battleship Missouri, aboard which the Japanese surrender was signed September 2, 1945, bombarded Communist-held Samchok, on the Korean east cost 70 miles north of Pohang.

The Missouri had steamed up and down the coast silently Thursday while an escorting destroyer ran in and beat up Pohang.

Today at 7-a. m. the Missouri joined the fray.

A Navy communique, proudly describing the Missouri as "the world's mightiest ship," noted she had steamed 11,000 miles at high speed from Norfolk, Va., to Korea.

Symington Plans Crackdown On Defense Goods Profiteers

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A Government crackdown on "unpatriotic chiselers" responsible for recent price jumps in defense materials was promised yesterday.

Defense Production Chief W. Stuart Symington told the Senate Prepardeness Committee a few big-time commodity speculators have bought up huge supplies of rubber, zinc and other materials and are doing "serious damage" to the national economy and rearmament program by "hog profiteering."

He threatened to seize the stocks and publicize the names of the hoarders.

Symington also disclosed that President Truman has ordered the reopening of all standby synthetic rubber plants to step up production to maximum output.

After the Preparedness Committee's session, Chairman Lyndon Johnson (D., Tex.) announced Munitions Board officials will be called before the group next to explain why they cut back stockpiling of crude rubber several months ago instead of increasing it. The price has more than tripled in the past 10 months.

Johnson said the board has offered "four separate and differ-

Marines, Soldiers Meeting Schedule After Landing, Capturing Inchon

TOKYO (Saturday), Sept. 16 (AP).—Ahead of schedule, United States Marines drove toward Seoul today from their landing point at Inchon on Korea's west coast, cutting behind a 140,000-man Red army which other United Nations forces attacked frontally in the south this morning.

A flagship dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Relman Morin said reinforcements were pouring into the scene of Friday's landings while the first waves quickly seized all objectives and swept east of Inchon.

By mid-morning today, the advancing Leathernecks ceased calling for warship fire, suggesting they were meeting light opposition in their bid to seize all vital avenues for supplying and reinforcing the bypassed Red army.

A South Korean naval spokesman told Associated Press Correspondent Bill Shinn that the forces which stormed ashore at Inchon have captured all of that port and are driving inland toward a town only 10 miles west of Seoul. Inchon is 22 miles west of the communist-held South Korean capital.

The dispatch from the flagship quoted North Korean prisoners as saying they had been receiving reinforcements.

A total of 304 sorties (single flights) flown from heavy aircraft carriers in massive air strikes preceded and supported the invasion. This is a record for the Korean war.

One unconfirmed report claimed destruction of 198 trucks out of more than 200 on a highway from Seoul toward Inchon.

While Gen. Douglas MacArthur personally directed the United States Tenth Corps in a drive aimed at seizing Seoul's supply routes, United States, British and South Korean troops at the southern beachhead opened a heavy offensive this morning.

Supported by tanks, planes and artillery, they struck along a front of more than 70 miles from the

40,000 Men in Landing At Inchon, Is Estimate

A naval spokesman calculated yesterday that upward of 40,000 Marine and Army troops carried out the Inchon operation.

The spokesman said he understood that a Marine division and a full Army division plus attached Army troops took part in the invasion.

New Super-Liner, 3 Others on Ways To Be Troop Ships

The Government announced yesterday the 48,000-ton super passenger liner it is helping to build will be finished as a troop transport. The liner is to be named the United States.

Three 13,000-ton combination passenger-cargo ships also under construction will be converted into troop ships along with the luxury liner, the Federal Maritime Board and Maritime Administration announced.

The luxury liner now scheduled for conversion will carry upwards of 12,000 troops, while the three smaller ships will carry 2500 to 3000 troops each.

The 48,000 super-liner, which is under construction at Newport News, Va., was to have been the largest and most luxurious vessel ever built in this country.

Unidentified Man Dies In Blazing Automobile

Washington police were trying early today to determine the identity of a man who apparently burned to death in a blazing automobile in the rear of the Northeast Motor Company, Bladensburg rd. and Oats st. ne.

Police said an unidentified woman telephoned about 12:30 a. m. to report a fire at that address. A rescue squad responded but the man was dead when it arrived.

Girl, 22 Others Enlist in Naval Reserve Here

Twenty-two men from the metropolitan Washington area and an Alexandria woman became members of Organized Naval Reserve units here this week, Potomac River Naval Command headquarters said yesterday.

The Wave is Miss Althea Winslow of 313A Raymond ave., Alexandria. She has been assigned to a surface division with the rating of seaman recruit.

Of the men, six joined Washington's only organized submarine reserve unit; one became a member of an organized Seabee company, and the others were assigned to the six surface divisions based here.

The reservists will attened a training meeting each week at the Naval Gun Factory, 8th and M sts. se., and go on active training duty, probably aboard ship, for two weeks each year.

Recruiting officials also announced that 10 men were sworn into the regular Navy yesterday, and that there were 20 other applicants, seven of whom were immeditely found to be ineligible.

Thirteen men were sworn into the Army, and seven into the Air Force.

The Army reserve enlisted seven men from among 12 applicants.

The Marines enlisted one man for active duty, enlisted a former Marine for inactive duty, and accepted three other men for future enlistment.

U. S.-Russ War Coming, Says Father Walsh

War between Russia and the United States is inevitable but its outbreak in the immediate future is not probable.

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent of the Foreign Service School of Georgetown University, presented this international forecast to members of Arthur Gardiner American Legion Post at a luncheon at the Army and Navy Club yesterday.

The Catholic expert on geopolitics told the group the inevitability of conflict is due to Russian and not to American policy. He cited statements by Lenin and Stalin to back up a contention that "those who think they can exist together in the world in peace are biting on granite."

Continued efforts to prevent the inevitable collision were urged. As a means to this end, "the persuasion of force" was recommended and the Soviet rulers were described as immune to the "force of persuasion."

The speaker took a hopeful view of the immediate future, expressing the belief that Soviet Russia has let pass its best opportunity for easy European conquest.

'Blacked Out,' Plea of Engineer In Wreck Killing 32

MINEOLA, N. Y., Sept. 15 (U.P.). Long Island Railroad Engineer Jacob Kiefer "blacked out" just before the Rockville Centre train wreck that killed 32 passengers in February, his attorney said today.

James O'Connell told a jury the 55-year-old engineer, on trial for second-degree manslaughter, blacked out because of high blood pressure and did not revive in time to see a red light and avoid a head-on crash with another train. O'Connell made the illness plea after Assistant District Attorney Henry Root Stern charged Kiefer with criminal negligence and asked for a conviction.

The American Legion, with colorful ceremony, yesterday laid the cornerstone for its new seven-story Washington branch headquarters at 1608 K st. nw.

Franklin D'Olier, Newark, N. J., first national commander, and George N. Craig of Brazil, Ind., present head, were among some 600 Legion dignitaries and guests present for the 3 p. m. ceremony brave with fluttering flags and the martial music of the United States Army Band.

D'Olier, who led the Legion in 1919 and 1920, recalled the early days of the organization and its financial difficulties, and said, "little did we think we would be able to raise a million dollars of our own money (for a building fund) and go along as we have.

"The only message I can give you," he said, "is, carry on as you have so well these many years."

Won't Yield to Reds

Craig said that the Legion in time of peace tries to preserve those ideals for which its members fought in time of war, and said he liked to think that the cause of American democracy has been strengthened a little by the Legion.

Repeating a statement he has made on other occasions, Craig said, "there is no room in the United States for the American Legion and the Communist Party, and we of the American Legion are not going to move out."

Milo J. Warner, of Toledo, Ohio, past national commander and chairman of the building committee, traced the history of the Legion's Washington headquarters since a 1933 Chicago convention resolution authorized a building here.

As a result of that resolution, Warner said, a committee headed by J. Monroe Johnson, now chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was appointed, and in 1934 purchased the present K street site. The site was occupied by a residence converted to office use until torn down to make room for the new building.

Warner said that in 1943 another building committee was created and a million dollars appropriated. This was later increased by the profit from the sale of some property near Capital Plaza. When the new building is completed and furnished, he said, the committee hopes to turn back approximately $300,000 of the building fund.

Describing the building, Warner said it would be 50 by 110 feet, have 39,000 square feet of floor space, and be distinguished by a 13-foot figure of "a battle-hardened veteran" 40 feet above street level on the front facade.

GI With 3 Narrow Escapes Reported Among Wounded

Corpl. Cobb

Pfc. Guice

Two more District soldiers and one Harrisonburg, Va., soldier were listed as wounded in Korea on Defense Department casualty list No. 96 released last night.

Private First Class Fred M. Guice, jr., 18, the oldest of five sons of Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Guice of 491 I st. sw., was seriously wounded September 3, his parents have been informed.

He enlisted in the Army three years ago and has spent a year in Korea and a year in Japan. He came home for a 60-day furlough earlier this year, his family said.

Mrs. Guice last heard from her son in a letter dated September 3, the day he was wounded, telling her he was moving up toward the front.

Born in Greenville, S. C., Private Guice moved to Washington with his family in 1935. He attended Jefferson Junior High School here. His father is a painter at Fort Myer.

Although he is now listed as a Washingtonian, Corporal William Cobb, jr., 20, has never lived here. His mother, Mrs. Lizzie C. Blakely, a practical nurse, who lives at 6 I st. nw., moved here nine days ago from Miami, Fla.

Born in Hopkinsville, Ky., Corpl. Cobb enlisted in the Army at Miami in August, 1948. He reenlisted a year later and had been serving in Japan with the Twenty-fourth Infantry when the Korea action began.

Although he wasn't listed as wounded until August 30, he "came near being killed three times," early in the fighting, Corporal Cobb wrote his mother on July 7.

On July 2, he wrote, he was grazed by shrapnel and a mortar shell, and was strafed by an American plane.

Pvt. Richard P. Derrow, son of Preston Isaac Derrow of Harrisonburg, Va., was the third man listed as wounded.

Listed as killed in action was First Lieut. William R. Frost, whose parents are visiting at 4700 Connecticut ave. nw. Lieutenant Frost is from Louisville, Ky., according to his father, Col. William R. Frost, a retired Army colonel.

U. S. Troops Drive on Seoul, Attack Along Southern Front

beachhead's south end up to and beyond Taegu.

A dispatch from AP Correspondent Jack Macbeth said the troops north of Taegu struck toward Seoul.

In their path, however, Macbeth said, were the enemy's Third, Tenth, Thirteenth and First divisions with an estimated 24,000 men.

Units in the United Nations attack were identified officially as the United States First Cavalry Division, the Sixth South Korean Division, and the British Twenty-seventh Brigade.

Other unidentified elements were in support of the attack.

Swinging over to the offensive a day after General Douglas MacArthur personally directed amphibious landings at Inchon, the ground forces sought to tear the line to pieces and send spearheads 165 miles northwestward toward Seoul.

The first of three coordinated blows against the southeast beachhead was struck at 7 a. m. along the Naktong River, between Taegu and the southern front.

Two hours later, simultaneous attacks began north and northwest of Taegu, near the center of the battle line and west of Masan at the south end of the front.

Associated Press Correspondent Jack Macbeth said the attack north of Taegu kicked off while planes and artillery pinned down Communists dug in on mountain positions.

Swinton said the Americans at the outset of the attack burst from their defense positions but reports indicated hard fighting was ahead.

The Communists were swiftly threatened with:

1. Being trapped from behind at Inchon by Tenth Corps operations which speedily penetrated 2 miles into that port city the first day.

2. With being cut off from retreat along the east coast road by South Korean commandos who went ashore Friday at three points north of Red-held Pohang.

3. With being split down the middle by today's push beyond Taegu—the key American base which the Reds came close to capturing, once fighting to within less than 7 miles of it.

Reds dug in on heights dominating the approaches to Taegu, were pounded by low-flying fighter bombers and field guns as the U. N. troops struck along highways leading north.

[The United Press said the Eighth Army announced that the United Nations troops in Korea had been bolstered by the reactivated First Army Corps. This corps was reorganized at Fort Bragg, N. C., only last August 2. During World War II the First Army Corps was in the New Guinea and Philippine campaigns.

[The units in the corps were not disclosed, but it was announced that Maj. Gen. Frank W. Milburn is in command.—Editor's Note.]

The landings at Inchon were made Friday morning at 6:30 and Friday evening at 5:30. The Navy said at Washington that the Marines suffered "negligible" losses in the landing.

General MacArthur, in his familiar weatherbeaten braided cap and suntans, personally directed the daring gamble which had as its first objective the Red-held South Korean capital of Seoul.

Twenty-two miles inland from the west coast port of Inchon, Seoul is the funnel through which nearly all North Korean men and supplies must pass.

The North Korean radio at Pyongyang said they had covered half the distance—or 11 miles—but there was no confirmation of this. The advance was under heavy enemy fire, but the Navy said Marine casualties were slight.

To Cut Off Reinforcements

"We are going to try to seize that distribution area, so that it will be impossible for the North Koreans to get any additional men or more than a trickle of supplies," the general told correspondents who accompanied him.

"When the enemy is caught between two wings of our forces . . . his forces will sooner or later disintegrate and cease to be a coordinated, fighting army."

Subordinates said he had conceived the bold operation about July 12 when United States Eighth Army and South Korean defenders were being hacked and torn on the Kum River line in mid-South Korea.

The United Nation defense, now squeezed back into a beachguard of about 50 by 70 miles in the southeast corner of Korea, reported moderate gains at many points Friday after having checked repeated massive assaults by the invading North Koreans in the past two months.

Other Landings on East Coast

Simultaneously with the Inchon assault, South Korean Republican troops made secondary landings on the Korean east coast behind the Red lines. The South Koreans also reported an allied landing on the west coast at Kunsan, 115 miles south of Inchon, but this was not officially confirmed.

Nor was there confirmation of a South Korean report that American parachute troops had landed at Kimpo airfield, 12 miles northwest of Seoul.

The Inchon landings, which began at 6:30 a. m. Friday (5:30 p. m. Thursday, EDT.) were directed by MacArthur from a small launch under a canopy of naval shellfire.

MacArthur gambled that Russia and Communist China would not directly enter the Korean conflict.

Inchon is 310 miles southeast of Russia's Manchurian naval base of Port Arthur; 420 miles southwest of Vladivostok, Soviet Siberian naval base; and 310 miles east across the Yellow Sea from Tsingtao, the Chinese Communist naval base which once was used by the United States Seventh Fleet.

He also gambled that American amphibious landing technique could overcome the perils of sticky miles of mudflats and slippery sea walls on the Inchon waterfront.

Here is how that second gamble paid off:

American and British warships and carrier-based planes poured a rain of shells and bombs on little Wolmi Island, connected to Inchon by a half-mile causeway. Fifteen seconds after the covering fire stopped, Marines hit the island's rocky edge.

Thirty-two minutes later the Marines of the First Division, under fire from enemy shore guns, planted the Stars and Stripes atop Wolmi's highest hill.

United States Tenth Corps Infantry—a force not otherwise identified—stormed the stretch across the Inchon sea walls 11 hours later. Their landing was held up until 5:30 p. m. (4:30 a. m. EST) to take advantage of the high tide.

The tide at Inchon rises as much as 28 feet—one of the highest in the world. When the tide rolls in it covers several hundred yards of mud flats and laps at the base of Inchon's slimy stone sea walls.

Marines Quickly Seize Captives

The Navy in Washington said the Marines took 80 prisoners in the initial assault.

Associated Press Correspondent Relman Morin, with the landing forces, reported from Inchon beach that United States tanks were fighting less than 15 minutes after the first troops hit the shore.

"The Navy and Marines have never shone more brightly than this morning," MacArthur signaled the assault force.

New commanders entered the United Nations roster with the landing at Inchon.

Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, MacArthur's chief of staff, heads the Tenth Army Corps. Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Smith commaands the First Marine Division. Rear Admiral James Henry Doyle is the amphibious attack commander.

The landing was observed also by Vice Admiral Arthur Struble, Seventh Fleet commander, and Lieut. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., commander of the Fleet Marine Force in the Pacific.

262 Ships Aid Landing

Associated Press Correspondent Russel Brines, who accompanied MacArthur on the landing—MacArthur's twelfth—said 262 ships put the Marines and infantrymen ashore and gave them protection from the sea and sky.

In the fleet were 194 American vessels, 12 British, three Canadian, two Australian, two New Zealand, one French, one Dutch, 32 U. S. ships on lease to Japan, and the remainder South Korean.

South Korean Marines simultaneously made three landings on Korea's east coast—at Yongdok, 25 miles north of the Red-held port of Pohang; at Changsa, 18 miles north of Pohang, and at a point just two miles north of Pohang.

In the fighting along the United Nations beachhead perimeter there was this action:

South Koreans occupied Angang, nine miles southwest of Pohang, and advanced up to 2000 yards across the Angang-Pohang road.

To the west, other Republican forces advanced to a point 12 miles north of Youngchon, 16 miles west of Angang.

On the First Cavalry's left flank, to the south along the Naktong River, the U. S. Second Division regained the small amount of ground lost to four companies of Reds early Friday four miles west of Yongsan, 28 miles southwest of Taegu.

At the southern end of the lines, two companies of the United States Twenty-fifth Division were overrun and driven from positions near Haman, but by nightfall were battling to regain the lost ground. Other elements of the Twenty-fifth eliminated an enemy pocket in the vicinity of Taesan Mountain, killing 125 Reds and dispersing the remainder.

Marines Enter Seoul —It Was 56 Years Ago

The Marines landed at Inchon and marched 31 miles in 11 hours to enter Seoul—56 years ago on July 23, 1894.

A detachment of 21 Leathernecks made that landing to protect the United States Minister and American legation at Seoul during a war being fought in Korea by Japanese and Chinese forces.

Wants to Forget King Farouk

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MIMI MEDART, 17-year-old St. Louis, Mo., girl, wears a smile and dark glasses as she leaves plane in London Thursday after a flight from Paris. She said she was "trying to forget" King Farouk. Her name was linked romantically with the 30-year-old Egyptian monarch when it was reported they met last month at a French resort hotel. She said the King is going to Cairo for Christmas and "friends" have invited her to go there, too

British Reds Accused of Sabotage Plot

LONDON, Sept. 15 (AP). — The Labor government declared today it has uncovered a developing Communist plot to sabotage Britain's defense build-up with a series of lightning strikes.

Labor Minister George Isaacs said British Reds are aiming their first blows at the docks, the transport system and the nation's meat supplies.

He told the House of Commons an organization set up to operate the master plan will go into action at a series of worker mass meetings this weekend.

Anthony Eden, Conservative leader, termed Isaacs' statement "one of the gravest which has been made to us in the House in recent years in times of peace." In reply to a question from Eden, the Labor Minister said if necessary, Parliament will be asked for new legislation to strengthen the government's hand against the Reds.

Isaacs said Communist agitators already are in action in a huge and spreading bus strike which all but foundered the London transport system today. With 15,558 driver and conductors idle in the wildcat walkout, 2300 of the city's buses failed to run.

Prime Minister Attlee and some cabinet members held an emergency meeting this afternoon to discuss countermeasures.

Commons Extends Draft to 24 Months

LONDON, Sept. 15 (AP).—The House of Commons tonight extended the service of British draftees from 18 to 24 months. Fiual action was swift after an uproar set off by remarks questioning War Minister John Strachey's fitness to hold office.

In an unusual parliamentary speedup the house gave the draft service extension measure its second reading—approval in principle—and third reading, or final enactment, within an hour. It had full support of all parties and there was no record vote. The measure will keep 77,000 men in uniform for the next six months who otherwise would have left the army.

During the debate the house whether Strachey should be enwas plunged into an uproar over trusted with the job of leading a fight against communism.

T. H. Clarke, a Conservative, suggested that the government look into the credentials of Strachey, an avowed Communist sympathizer in the 1930s who says he has now abandoned his former views. He has been a frequent target of criticism from the Conservatives.

Japan Treaty Will Permit Rearmament

By The Associated Press

The United States is ready to press its wartime Pacific allies to accept a soft peace with Japan, without restrictions on rearmament or trade, and without reparations or indemnity.

Administration plans also call for retaining Okinawa as an American military base under a United Nations trusteeship, and, with Tokyo's consent, to keep American troops in Japan after the formal occupation is ended. John Foster Dulles has headed the work on the treaty program.

This American program was outlined yesterday by responsible officials, following President Truman's statement that he has directed the State Department to renew treaty preliminaries immediately with 12 other wartime foes of Japan. Soviet Russia is included.

Indications Received

If Moscow, as widely expected, continued to insist on a treaty dictated by the big powers alone, officials believe the non-Communist nations will agree to a separate peace settlement which would leave Japan in a technical state of war with Russia and in the western camp. Indications already have been received that Japanese leaders favor this course.

The terms proposed by the United States for Japan contrast with those imposed on Italy and the Eastern European allies of Hitler, which had to pay reparations and were limited in the size of their armed forces.

However, it is proposed to strip Japan of Formosa, just as Italy was deprived of her colonies in Africa.

The matter of keeping some United States troops in Japan, as "protective allies" rather than as conquerors, would be worked out by the United States and Japan, and would not be involved in the peace treaty proper.

Other Questions

Decisions on other questions involved in the treaty and Japan's future include:

1. Peace Conference — Whether to hold a conference, when and where, will be decided in consultation with the other Allies.

2. China—The United States "at the present stage" will ignore Communist China and deal with the Nationalists.

3. Formosa—a tentative idea is to have the treaty strip the island from Japan and leave its ultimate disposition up to the U. N.

4. Economic—restrictions would be lifted entirely on normal Japanese production and trade. The Korean crisis and the resultant increased United States buying abroad promise to make Japan selfsupporting soon, officials think. Before June the calculations were four or five years would be required. Forecasts are that Japan in the future can pay her way and raise her standard of living by building up trade with Southeast Asia and other areas, without dependence on the Chinese mainland.

Some opposition or criticism is looked for from Australia, the Philippines and Burma which suffered from Japanese aggression. They have been critical in the past of any move to permit Japan to emerge again as a military power. The Philippines has taken the lead in demanding heavy reparations payments.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur was credited with making "important contributions" to the U. S. policy.

4 Congressmen, Wives Arrive in Frankfurt

FRANKFURT, Germany, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Four United States Congressmen and their wives arrived here by air today from Dublin. They were Senators Owen W. Brewster (R., Me.) and Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) and Representatives William Robert Poage (D., Tex.) and Harold Dunbar Cooley (D., N. C.).

They were members of the United States delegation to the Inter-Parliamentary Union Conference in Dublin. They will leave Sunday for Vienna. Some will go on to Athens and Istanbul.

One on the Aisle—

Two Factual Films Contrast Sharply

By Richard L. Coe

THE DUPONT'S new program presents two contrasting fact films, "Farewell to Yesterday" and "Holy Year 1950." Both are from Twentieth Century-Fox.

While "Farewell to Yesterday" in outline may strike you as about the same ground covered by the March of Time's "The Golden Twenties" and Warner's "Fifty Years Before Your Eyes," it has more of a central theme and considerable editorializing.

That theme is frankly propaganda, President Spyros P. Skouras points out. It is a reminder, he says, of yesterday's mistakes and today's threats.

And so it is concerned with war, tracing our years from Versailles to the outbreak of the Korean war. There is nothing tender or comic in this pictorial record. The highlights of the years add up to a forbidding conclusion: that only in strength is there safety for freedom.

Those all-too-familiar highlights, seen in an unremitting procession of international disasters, cover the years between the two wars bitterly: the rise of Mussolini and his acceptance by the Italian peninsula; the overshadowing figure of Hitler to the north and the pathetic figure of Mr. Chamberlain and his hopeful scrap o. paper.

War in the West and war in the East pass before your eyes with their sacrifices and wastes and over them all thunders the strongest voice in the collection: Winston Churchill's.

Churchill's impassioned calm in a speech to his wartime cabinet echoes through till the end of the picture, a voice of hope demanding more from the people than other leaders ever seem to dare to ask.

And after the faces have cleared away it is an echo of Churchill's demanding theme that is repeated as we watch the imperialist aims of Soviet Russia.

At the risk of saber-rattling, Twentieth Century has made its point clearly: appeasement didn't work before and it won't work now.

Louis Tetunic did the editing and Joseph Kenas' naration is alternately handled by Sidney Blackmer, John Larkin, Kermit Murdock and William Post, jr. It's stimulating to look at an album with a point of view.

"Holy Year 1950"

"Holy Year 1950" is a detailed visit to the Vatican City and the churches of Rome pictured under the direction of Washington's Movietone Newsman, Anthony Muto.

Commentary for the lengthy Holy Year visit is by the Very Rev. Robert I. Gannon, S. J., former president of Fordham University.

There are numerous views of the great variety of pilgrims from all parts of the world, including some of the group led by Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York. Pius XII is shown in many of his public appearances and the medieval traditions of the Roman Church are affectionately pictured. Churchgoers who were unable to make the pilgrimage themselves will find "Holy Year 1950" a stimulating visit, and those who had such a trip will surely want to see Muto's record of it.

TEX RITTER and his Western Revue will be on hand for three shows today at Turner's Arena. . . . Purge Hits Another Top Red In East Zone, Vote List Hints

BERLIN, Sept. 15 (AP).—The apparent purging of another leading figure in East Germany's Communist-controlled government was disclosed tonight with publication of the top 15 percent of the candidate list for the October 15 parliamentary elections.

Missing from the list is Dr. Hermann Kastner, chairman of the Liberal Democratic Party and Deputy Prime Minister. Dropping of an official means he is through as far as holding a major office is concerned.

Publication of the list gave further hint of the extent of the purge recently initiated by Walter Ulbright, secretary-general of the ruling Socialist Unity (Communist) Party, against those he considers too lukewarm toward Russia.

The purge already has hit a half dozen high East zone government officials. All were accused of anti-Sovietism.

Inclusion on the list is tantamount to election, since none of the nominees is opposed. It is forbidden to abstain from voting since that has been ruled as an "act against the state and against the peace." Thus East German voters have no choice in the selection of their officials, all of whom are chosen in party conclave.

[Most of the 200,000 German policemen in the Russian zone were on a general alert tonight and leaves of all Communist government employes were canceled by Red leaders, apparently alarmed over a lack of interest in the elections, the United Press reported.

[Border controls have been tightened to discourage attempted escapes to the West, and intelligence reports said the alert has created a state of nervous tension and jitters in East Germany.]

Elevator Traps Janitor's Wife For Second Time

Mrs. Edna Carter was trapped, for the second time in a year, in an elevator at 1611 Connecticut ave. yesterday between 12:30 and 1 p. m., but was rescued unhurt by firemen.

Mrs. Carter, whose husband, Walter, is janitor for the apartments at that address, said the elevator stopped just below the fourth floor. Her plight was discovered by Cristobal Borras, supervisor of the Borras School of Language at the same address.

He summoned firemen, who forced open the elevator doors and helped Mrs. Carter to freedom with a ladder. Firemen said a fuse had blown out. Mrs. Carter said it was her second such experience, having been similarly trapped for an hour about a year ago.

Danish Cleric Officiates at Royal Nuptials

GLAMIS, Scotland, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Price Georg of Denmark asked a Danish seaman's pastor to officiate Saturday when he weds a niece of Britain's Queen Elizabeth, after a Scottish Episcopal clergyman was forbidden to perform the ceremony because the bride-to-be is a divorcee.

The handsome, 30-year-old Prince is scheduled to marry Viscountess Anson in the tiny private chapel at historic Glamis Castle, setting of Shakespeare's "Macbeth" and Queen Elizabeth's former home.

Canon Harry Rorison of the Scottish Episcopal Church was ordered not to perform the ceremony because the 33-year-old viscountess had divorced her former husband in 1948, charging desertion.

A Buckingham Palace official said that King George and Queen Elizabeth would not be present at the wedding, but he said the Queen would attend a luncheon after the ceremony. The Viscountess, formerly Miss Anne Ferelith Bowes-Lyon, is a daughter of the Queen's brother.

Georg is second cousin to King Frederik of Denmark.

60 More Guilty In Alexandria Auto Tag Drive

A one-man campaign against automobile owners who have failed to purchase city license tags in Alexandria brought 60 more convictions in the city's Police Court yesterday.

Of the total, 56 forfeited collateral of $5 apiece. Two others yielded $10 collateral, assessed because they had failed to purchase tags before appearing in response to summonses. Two others, who appeared in court, drew straight fines of $5.

The defendants were charged by Corpl. Leslie Saunders, who has been assigned to a special detail on license law violators. Police pointed out that owners of all vehicles garaged in the city for more than 30 days a year must obtain the tags.

Celler Group Counsel Named Chicago U. Dean

Edward H. Levi, University of Chicago law professor who has been on leave as counsel to the House Judiciary subcommittee investigating monopolies, has been appointed dean of the university's law school.

The appointment was announced by Chancellor Robert M. Hutchins. Levi, who has served six months as counsel for the monopoly investigation headed by Representative Celler (D., N.Y.), succeeds Wilber G. Katz.

U. N. Airmen Blast Reds In Nutcracker

TOKYO (Saturday), Sept. 16 (U.P.). — Fighter-bombers of the United Nations air force, loaded with bombs and rockets, roared off from Japanese bases today to pound and blast Communist troops caught in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's "nutcracker" operation in Korea.

Air Force headquarters said F-80 jets and F-51 Mustangs took off for a full-scale effort "in support of Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker's troops" defending the U. N. perimeter in South Korea.

Navy and Marine carrier-based planes, meanwhile, worked over the Seoul-Inchon area ahead of the Marines advancing toward Kimpo airfield and the former South Korean capital.

Weather reports today predicted broken clouds and scattered rain for southern Korea.

A headquarters release said that, while the landings were getting under way, flights of B-29s struck at important warehouse and supply concentrations at Taejon and Andong below the thirty-seventh parallel.

B-26 light bombers struck at railway and highway bridges in the Sangju area and smashed at an important highway bridge 3 miles south of Hamchang.

First Lieut. George R. Thompson, jr., Port Warren, Fla., estimated that three sections of the bridge at Hamchang were knocked out, according to the Air Force release. "We also got some enemy vehicles," he was quoted as saying.

Commanding Invasion Forces

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

AT INCHON—These are the men who headed the forces which pushed ashore yesterday at the west Korean port city of Inchon, far behind North Korean lines. Left to right: Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, General MacArthur's chief of staff, who is heading the Tenth Army Corps; Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Smith, commanding the First Marine Division, and Rear Admiral James Henry Doyle, amphibious attack commander

Gen. Anderson Rebuked and Transferred

By The Associated Press

Maj. Gen. Orvil Anderson, who was suspended as head of the Air War College after offering publicly to destroy Russia's A-bomb centers, has been rebuked and will be reassigned to a nonteaching post in the Air Force, it was reported reliably yesterday.

Anderson was suspended September 1 by Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, following publication of an interview in the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser. In that interview Anderson was quoted as saying:

"Give me the order to do it and I can break up Russia's five A-bomb nests in a week, and when I went up to Christ . . . I think I could explain to him that I had saved civilization."

In announcing his suspension as commandant of the Air War College at the Air University in Alabama, General Vandenberg issued a statement saying the primary purpose of the Air Force is the prevention of war.

Following the suspension, an Air Force spokesman said the next step would be to determine the facts.

It is now reported that this has been done, General Anderson rebuked, and a decision reached to reassign him to an Air Force post outside the training command. In the future, it was said, Anderson will have nothing to do with teaching.

Anderson was operations chief of the United States Eighth Air Force in England during World War II.

No information is yet available as to where and what General Anderson's new assignment will be

Yanks in Battle Line Thrilled by Landings, Hope They Foreshadow End of Struggle

By Stan Swinton

MASAN FRONT, South Korea, Sept. 15 (AP).—Optimism swept this front tonight as word spread of the landing in Communist-held territory in and around Inchon.

"We are that much nearer home," exulted Tank Lieut. Donald Barnard of Richmond, Calif.

"This might mean the end of the war. Gosh, I hope so," exclaimed Pfc. Charles Fabiszak of Beloit, Wis.

The weary infantrymen on the southern front were more pleased than surprised. The landing plan had been one of the worst-kept secrets of the war. Nearly everyone from recruits to generals had been expecting it.

The general reaction was: "We are over the hump, boys, but there's a tough fight ahead."

Britain Issues First Korea Casualty List

LONDON, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The British War Office issued its first casualty report on the Korean campaign today. It listed one British soldier killed, 17 wounded and one missing in action.

North Koreans' Radio Ignores U. N. Landings

TOKYO, Saturday, Sept. 16 (U.P.). The people of North Korea still did not know about the United States Marine landings at Inchon today if they depend upon the Pyongyang radio for their news.

For the second consecutive day, the communique of the North Korean people's army failed to mention the amphibious assault at Korea's principal west coast port. Instead, it told North Koreans that their army "is advancing toward Taegu and is continuing to drive vigorously against stubborn resistance."

Tanks Among Clouds Kill 193 Korean Reds

ON MASAN FRONT, South Korea, Sept. 15 (AP).—Tank warfare in the clouds atop a small mountain killed 193 Korean Reds today and wiped out a bitter pocket of resistance behind the American lines. Thirty-five Reds were captured.

Gabrielson Remains Confident GOP Can Win on Korea Issue

CHICAGO, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Republican national chairman said today the GOP can win the November 7 election on the Korean war issue even if the war ends in a United Nations victory before then.

Guy G. Gabrielson said that even if Friday's U. S. invasion leads to a quick peace "the people are still sore about how we ever got into war in the first place."

He also told newsmen at a Midwest GOP conference that Senator Taft (R., Ohio) will be reelected and Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) will be defeated "if we keep on working as hard as we are now."

Representative Clarence Brown of Ohio, told the conference that in his State "we are running scared."

But he added quickly:

"That's the way to run if you want to win."

Taft is opposed by Democratic State Auditor Joseph Ferguson in what Brown called "the hardest, toughest, dirtiest campaign in history."

Lucas is opposed by Republican Everett M. Dirksen, former Congressman who told the meeting yesterday he is sure he will unseat President Truman's Senate leader.

Taft, as GOP Senate policy leader, is the Democrats' No. 1 target.

Congress Control Not Predicted

Gabrielson said he is "very optimistic" about all Republican congressional contests. But he did not predict the GOP will win control of either house.

He estimated a net gain of five instead of the required seven Senate seats, and 25 to 30 House seats, well short of the 47 needed to outvote Democrats.

The conference, last of several regional meetings to discuss strategy, was told campaign contributions are 50 percent greater this year than they were at this stage in 1946, when the GOP won control of Congress.

The Korean war and Truman Administration "bungling" were held to be the chief campaign weapons of the party.

The communism issue and the attack on the Brannan farm plan will be secondary, conferees agreed.

Developing New Blood

John Tope of Detroit, national chairman of the Young Republicans, said the party is making good progress in developing new blood among college students.

Brown, in a luncheon address, said the party should disavow any blame for the Korean war.

Gabrielson said a Nation-wide "get out the vote" campaign has achieved a third of its goal within a month.

The campaign proposes to get one million volunteers, each of whom would get signed "I will vote" pledges from five other persons who failed to vote in 1948. So far 300,000 persons, or 1,500,000 possible voters, have been signed.

AF to Call Few Guard Supporting Units

The Air Force said yesterday that a few small supporting units of the Air National Guard will be called to active service soon.

These units will be in addition to four fighter-bomber groups and one tactical reconnaissance group, all of the National Guard, whose call was announced September 7.

The Air Force said that small supporting units include weather stations, aircraft control and warning units, supply and maintenance units, housekeeping and transportation units.

Sergeants See 3 Captured GIs Burned Alive by Communists

WITH U. S. SECOND DIVISION IN KOREA, Sept. 15 (AP).—American soldiers told an Army inquiry board today that at least three of their buddies were thrown into a huge roaring fire by their Red captors on the western front recently.

This latest grisly story in a list of North Korean atrocities against captured Americans came to light at a U. S. Second Division investigation.

The burned Americans were captured when Reds overran their advance outpost August 31. Their escaped comrades told the board of inquiry that at least three American GIs were thrown into a bonfire, about ten feet across, built for that purpose with old blankets and anything else available.

Sergt. Lister Marcum of Vaughn's Mill, Ky., said he was 200 to 300 yards away from the fire and saw three Americans hurled alive into the flames. He said he heard one of them scream: "Don't do it! Don't do it!"

S/Sergt. Max H. Stephen, 23, of Milliken, Colo., said he witnessed the fire deaths from 150 feet. He lay still, he said, hoping the Reds would not see him.

The second man, Stephen said, walked with difficulty as he was prodded up to the blaze. He pleaded with the Reds not to burn him, but "they slugged him with something and threw him in."

Red Cross Chief Leaves on Korean Inspection Tour

Frank T. Cleverley, American Red Cross administrator for foreign operations, is en route to Korea and Japan to inspect Red Cross operations there, it was announced yesterday.

Cleverley will confer with military leaders on all Red Cross activities in the Far Eastern theater. He will be gone from two weeks to a month.

Cleverley lives at 3308 Valley dr., Alexandria.

Red Cross headquarters said its professional staff in Japan and Korea has been increased from a total of 220 to 300 persons since the Korean war began.

Iran Reports Soviet Talks Going Well

TEHRAN, Iran, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Premier Gen. Ali Razmara said today Iran's trade negotiations with Russia are "progressing satisfactorily." He predicted the trade pact would benefit Iran's northern provinces greatly.

Razmara said he hoped for an early loan from the United States Export-Import Bank in Washington for urgently needed agricultural and road-building equipment.

Razmara did not say how large a loan he expects, but remarked he hopes to find jobs for Iran's 500,000 unemployed on farms and in new businesses he believes will mushroom in the northern provinces.

(In Washington, it was understood Iran wants 100 million dollars.)

"The Persian farmer could till his land forever with antiquated equipment," Razmara said. "But to increase the yield and till more land and thus raise the national wealth and standard of living, we urgently need tractors and other machinery."

"We also plan to asphalt some 3000 miles of roads, linking the main centers, and we need the necessary equipment."

'Burma Surgeon' Is Refused Bail Pending His Trial

Rangoon, Burma, Sept. 15 (AP).—A special tribunal today denied an application for the release on bail of Dr. Gordon S. Seagrave, who faces trial on charges of high treason.

Seagrave, an American citizen who became famous as the "Burma Surgeon," had sought release pending his trial on the grounds of his age and failing health in prison. The court ruled his age—53 years—was insufficient excuse and that observation of his movements in the courtroom did not indicate an impairment of his health sufficient to necessitate his release.

The surgeon, who fought disease for 25 years in north Burma, saved innumerable lives and marched with Gen. Joseph Stilwell, was arrested August 15 on suspicion of aiding Karen rebels. He is to go on trial October 9. Conviction could mean the death penalty.

The state opposed bail, saying that Seagrave, if liberated, would intimidate prosecution witnesses who are nurses in Seagrave's American-equipped hospital.

Bomb Hits U. N. Office In Syria, Killing Worker

DAMASCUS, Syria, Sept. 15 (AP). The United Nations Relief and Works Agency offices here were blown up shortly after midnight today, killing a watchman and injuring two other persons.

Dr. Pierre Depage, Belgian U. N. agency mission chief, said he believed the blast was either an act of vengeance by an unemployed Arab refugee or intended as a protest against the agency. UNRWA is in charge of an estimated 55-million-dollar public improvement program to provide work for Arabs who fled Israel.

Army Will Re-Open Old Training Camps

By The Associated Press

The Army is planning to put some of its World War II training camps back into service.

Secretary of the Army Pace disclosed this yesterday at a meeting of a Senate Armed Services Subcommittee. Senator Morse (R., Oreg.) asked if the Army is thinking of reopening any camps as a result of the expanding military program and the possible enactment next year of a universal military training program.

"Unquestionably," Pace replied, "and our plans are being arranged for it."

He did not give any details. Morse cited Fort Des Moines in Iowa as "a beautiful example" of the kind of camp the Army should not dispose of as surplus. Pending legislation would turn that camp over to the state of Iowa.

The Senate passed and sent to the House yesterday a bill that would provide $130,000,000 for emergency war housing.

Senator Benton (D., Conn.), the bill's sponsor, said the Housing and Home Finance Agency could use up to $20,000,000 for prefabricated or portable housing at or near camps reactivated for training National Guard units.

Senator Bricker (R., Ohio) sponsored an amendment adding the other $100,000,000. It provides for housing wherever the President may designate—near war production centers or military installations.

The House sent to President Truman a bill, already approved by the Senate, giving Federal school aid to areas with heavy enrollments due to defense or other Government activities.

The bill did not provide any actual cash, but funds to put it into effect may be furnished by a pending appropriation measure.

Soldier's Note From Korean Foxhole Tells His Two Small Daughters Why Daddy Died

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15 (AP). Two little girls who can't yet read had a letter today they'll treasure all their lives.

Their daddy, Pfc. John J. McCormick, 28, wrote it from faraway Korea.

"There are a lot of bad men in the world," he wrote.

"So I have to help fight these men and keep them from coming where you and Mummie live. It might take a long while, and maybe Daddy will have to go and help God up in Heaven . . ."

The letter came to Mrs. Mary McCormick yesterday, three days after a telegram that said: "The Defense Department regrets to inform you that Pfc. John J. McCormick was killed in action August 10."

Mrs. McCormick read the letter herself, first, then as it instructed, she read it to her daughters, 6-year-old Rose Marie and her sister Joan, 3.

"This Is Daddy"

"This is Daddy," the letter said. "I want you to listen and pay attention while Mummie reads this to you. Just try and make believe I was there talking to you . . .

"I want you both to know that I'd be with you if I could, but there are a lot of bad men in the world, and if they were allowed to do what they wanted to do little girls like you wouldn't be allowed to go to church on Sunday or be able to go to the school you wanted to. . . .

"I always want you both to be good for Mummie, because she is the best Mummie in the whole wide world.

"She has always taken care of you while I have been away. You see, kids, I happened to be caught in two wars inside 10 years and the reason I am where I am today is because I am fighting for what I think is right.

"That's one thing I always want both of you to remember. If your conscience tells you something is right always stand up for it. You might be ridiculed for doing so, but in the long run you'll always find out that people respect you more for doing so. . . .

"All the Love In My Heart"

"I'll be in a hole fighting, in a few days, in a place called Korea, so I'm sending you all the love that's in my heart on this sheet of paper. I carry your picture, and Mummie's next to my heart, and if I have to go help God, you'll know that the last thought I had on this earth was for you two and Mummie. All my love and kisses. Be good and God bless you.

DADDY."

Mrs. McCormick, 27, showed the letter to a friend, Mrs. L. E. Shell, who "cried when she read it," the widow said. Mrs. Shell gave it to a newsman. It was published first today in the Philadelphia Inquirer, and across the Nation.

The response was instantaneous. Papers everywhere spread it across their front pages. Newsreel, radio and television people started looking for the girls and their mother.

Parallels Comdr. Shea Letter

To some who read the letter, it seemed to parallel the famous World War II letter from Comdr. John J. Shea, aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp. He wrote in 1942 to his son Jackie: "When you are a little bigger you will know why your Daddy is not home so much any more." That letter, too, mentioned "If I don't come back." When the Wasp was sunk near the Solomons Commander Shea was listed as "missing."

Called to a telephone from her work as a seamstress in a factory, Mrs. McCormick told a newsman she is "overwhelmed by all the publicity, and a little unhappy about it.

"This sort of thing should be kept in the family," she said. "I wish there was some way I could stop it."

The children, she said, are away just now, Rose Marie boarding at the Little Flower School and Joan living with a friend of her mother's.

"I just can't afford to keep up a home of my own at this time," Mrs. McCormick said. "But the children are well taken care of and I see them nearly every day. Everything is fine, just fine."

Joined Army at 17

Their daddy had been a GI most of the time since he grew to mansize. He joined the Army in 1939, had to lie about his 17 years to get in. During World War II he was a paratrooper; was wounded in Germany; came back to civilian jobs in Pottsville, Pa.—he worked in a gas station there—and near Chester, Pa.

"He came home one day last year and told me he had reenlisted," the widow recalled.

"John felt that the Army was where he was most needed, where he could do the most good for himself, his family and his country. He didn't know much else. He didn't have much experience, never graduated from high school."

Little Rose Marie and Joannie don't remember their father very well, even now, Mrs. McCormick said.

"And I haven't even a picture to show them. John never took a picture. I guess he just never thought about it.

"Rose Marie cries a little about her daddy. She understood when I told her daddy wasn't coming back."

And she'll always have that letter.

GI Loans Should Go On, Bankers Told

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 15 (AP).—The Veterans Administration asked bankers today to keep on lending money to war veterans who are subject to recall to military duty.

T. B. King, director of VA's loan guaranty service, told the Massachusetts Savings Banks Association in a prepared speech that VA "emphatically" has a policy of protecting the veteran who already has a loan but finds it hard to repay because of recall to arms.

As for applications for guaranteed loans from veterans who already are back in service, King said, each case must be analyzed carefully, particularly as to the veteran's source of income.

"Should you make a loan to a veteran who has a reserve status, or to one of draft age?" King asked. "The answer is emphatically yes.

"A lender should measure repayment ability solely on the basis of the applicant's income from his civilian employment—present and prospective—and the possibility of military service should not be given any weight whatever."

As to the loan applicant who already has been recalled to service, King said that if it appears that the requested loan will be beyond the veteran's ability to repay, the applicant should be advised to make a smaller purchase or to wait until the end of his tour of duty.

King pointed out that the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act of 1940 applies to a VA guaranteed loan as well as to a conventional loan. It provides that there can be no foreclosure while the borrower is in military service.

King said VA encourages the extension or modification of the terms of a loan, by postponement of all or part of the monthly payment, unless the veteran's default is willful or unless military service does not affect his ability to pay.

Army Defends Mental Test

general segment of the population.

The Army official noted that the Nation-wide draft statistics for the past July showed that the Army had tested 12,281 selectees, and rejected 7152, for a rejection rate of 58 percent. But during the same month there were 30,000 enlistments in the armed forces, mostly draft-age men. Therefore, the Army official argued, the overall rejection rate for the draft-age men for that month would run around 20 percent.

All of the factors taken together and properly integrated will show that the present rejection rate is actually better, not worse, that that of World War II, the Army spokesman said.

He also attacked Selective Service contentions that the Army's mental qualification test was too rigid. Virginia has reported, for instance, that around 70 percent of its rejections were due to failure to pass the qualification exam.

13% in World War II

The Armed Forces Qualification Test, given all draftees during the pre-induction examinations, covers both literacy and intelligence. The Army feels that until mobilization gets under way, draftees should have a minimum literacy so as to be able to carry out written instructions, and a minimum level of intelligence indicating a capacity to learn the things a soldier must be able to do.

In tests carried out during the last year of World War II, the armed forces found that 13 percent of the Nation's male population between the ages of 18 and 38 would fail to attain a passing score of 70 in the qualification examination.

A breakdown of the Nation's draft rejections for July, the Army states, shows that 15 percent of the draftees have been rejected solely for failure to pass the mental qualification test. That's pretty good, the Army maintains, considering that 13 percent of all males between the ages of 18 and 38 would flunk the test.

The Army official urged Selective Service officials to analyze their mental qualification rejection figures before hollering that the mental tests were too difficult. The Army's analysis of the District's rejections — described this week as "alarming"—indicates that Washington's draftees are of a higher intelligence and literacy level than the national average. Here's the District analysis:

During the past five weeks, the Army induction center rejected 848 out of 1414 District draftees for all reasons, 282 for failure to pass the qualification test. Of the 282 who flunked, 20 were white, representing 4 percent of all the white draftees; 262 were colored, representing 29 percent of all colored draftees. On the basis of the 1940 census, the District's population is 65 percent white; 35 percent colored.

Integrate the qualification test "flunkees" according to population ratio—that is, multiply the 4 percent white "flunkees" by 65 percent, and multiply the 29 percent colored "flunkees" by 35 percent, and add them together. The equated percentage of draftees who failed the mental qualification test here amounts to 12.95 percent—which is virtually the same as the average of failures in World War II, and considerably better than the present national average of 15 percent.

All this looks and sounds complicated. But from the Army's point of view, the mathematics speaks for itself, and proves to the Army's satisfaction, that the draft rejection rate is not "abnormally high" and that its mental qualification test is not "too high."

Symington Plans Crackdown On Defense Goods Profiteers

ent reasons for the cutbacks and that Chairman Hubert Howard will be quizzed "under oath" about the matter. He added a "thorough study" of the board's past and present practices and policies is planned.

Under questioning, Symington said there is "absolutely no justification" for the rise in the price of crude rubber. The lanky homefront mobilizer said his staff has not yet completed its studies on price rises of zinc and other vital materials but expects to soon.

Plans Ready Soon

He promised to have some "pratial plans" for dealing with the "profiteers" within a week or so.

Symington, who as chairman of the National Security Resources Board heads the industrial mobilization effort, noted that the new controls law gives the Government authority to seize inventories and penalize hoarders.

"My inclination would be to requisition their entire inventory and put it in the stockpile," he declared, adding that he'd also like to turn the spotlight on "these hoarders and show what they've been doing."

The implication was that he'd name names at a later meeting of ti. Preparedness Committee. The committee—set up to investigate all phases of the defense effort—then could call them for public quizzing on their activities. Members of the group seemed receptive to the idea.

Anti-Hoarding Ban Due

Meanwhile, the new National Production Authority prepared to issue an anti-hoarding order—its first curb on industry. It will be an "inventory control" decree setting up a scarcity list of materials vital to the preparedness program. Expected to be included are: steel, aluminum, cement, copper, lead, leather, lumber, paper, synthetic and natural rubber, wool, zinc and possibly others.

It would be forbidden to buy more than a normal operating supply of such material. Violators could be punished by up to a year in jail and a $10,000 fine. The order is expected to be issued Sunday and go into effect Monday. Another order requiring producers to give priority to buyers holding military contracts is expected later.

There was evidence of close teamwork between the Senate committee, Symington and President Truman in the order for full-blast synthetic rubber production.

Rubber Plants to Reopen

A week ago, the Preparedness Committee made public its first report demanding all-out expansion of synthetic rubber to make possible an increase in the rubber stockpile. The Senators conferred with Symington and President Truman, and the NSRB chief stepped into the picture with a proposal to the President, which the latter approved Thursday.

It calls for immediately reopening all remaining idle synthetic rubber production capacity and as much of the remaining standby butadiene (alcohol) facilities as are required for all-out rubber production. Two plants with a capacity of 80,000 tons a year—one operated by the Goodyear Co. at Akron and the other by B. F. Goodrich at Institute, W. Va.—will be opened, while plants at Louisville and Kobuda, Pa., will have idle facilities put in service.

This will provide 760,000 tons of general-purpose synthetic rubber a year, plus 75,000 tons of butyl rubber—largely used for inner tubes.

Symington also disclosed that Mr. Truman had ordered a broad survey made of rubber needs to determine whether additional synthetic plants or other sources should be sought. The Senators, commenting that the President faced an almost similar situation as to rubber in 1942, unanimously adopted a resolution commending him for his cooperation with them.

"Prowling Profiteers"

Senator Johnson declared Congress does not intend to stand idly by, and watch "prowling profiteers exact their pound of flesh" while Americans are fighting in Korea. He admonished Government officials to "quit talking" and begin acting. Symington said this would be done, and declared price controls would be employed if necessary.

But noting that wage controls are tied to price controls under the new law, he declared the "tragic part" about the price rises is that they are "in effect wage reductions." Labor has as yet made no general demand for wage increases, he added.

Another witness before the committee testified that millionaire oilman Edwin W. Pauley, former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, is a stockholder in a California firm helping operate a Government-owned rubber plant.

Gerald B. Hadlock, executive director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's Office of Rubber Reserve, said the California company is a "small business" firm selected for operation of a Government-owned synthetic rubber plant in accordance with congressional policy that the rubber program shall not be monopolized by the big rubber companies.

He Found No Pressure

He said the Pacific Co., in which Pauley has an interest, was chosen as one of two firms to operate a plant in Los Angeles, with a capacity of 60,000 tons a year, which was activated this month. Pacific Co. and the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. operate it as a partnership.

Hadlock declared that the RFC had dealt with Pauley among others in arranging the deal. He declared that to his knowledge no one in the Government had brought any pressure on the RFC to select the California company.

Jess Larson, General Services Administration chief, testified that new screening procedures have been put into effect which will assure that the Government is adequately protected against disposal of surplus facilities or war stocks which may be required. The committee had severely criticized some agencies for letting surplus property now in demand be sold even after the Korean fighting started.

Secretary of the Army Frank Pace testified the armed forces plan to "recapture" some World War II training camps which have been sold as surplus. Other closed-up posts still owned by the Government will be reopened, he said, but no decision has been made as to which ones.

Way Cleared for Marshall

Administration," he said to the accompaniment of Republican applause.

Short drew Democratic applause as well when he proposed that Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), long chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee and chairman of its Armed Services Committee since its inception, be named Secretary of Defense in Marshall's stead. Vinson himself halted the boom in his favor when Representative James Fulton (R., Pa.) attempted to substitute his name in the bill for that of Marshall.

The fight for the bill was led in the Senate by Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), who termed Marshall the "greatest and ablest" man available in "one of the gravest crises in our history." Byrd referred repeatedly to Marshall's "desire to serve only the people of this Nation" and recalled that 10 years ago he had withdrawn, at Marshall's request, a magazine article in which he proposed the then Chief of Staff for President.

Among Republicans attacking the measure were Senators William F. Knowland of California, Harry P. Cain of Washington, Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota. Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) was the lone Democrat who voted against the bill, although he did not take part in debate.

Rescue Unit Busy With Two Calls To Aid Injured

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad was called out twice within an hour yesterday morning to aid men injured on construction jobs in Bethesda.

At 8 a. m., Ben Thomas, 36, of 1225 4th st. sw., was caught in a small cave-in on a job at Arlington rd. and Bethesda ave. He was treated for minor injuries at Freedmen's Hospital.

At 8:45 a. m., the squad was called out again, this time to Western and Wisconsin aves., where Michael Cefaratti, 55, of 706 12th st. se., had fallen from a scaffold. Cefaratti was admitted to Suburban Hospital with back injuries. His condition was reported as good.

Overtures From Russia Likely

American troops occupied the South.

The Kremlin might order a reoccupation now, with the argument that what has been happening in the South is a disguised American occupation.

But this would be a grave decision, full of menace for the Soviet Union and for the non-Soviet world. It would confront the United States and other U. N. members with a brand-new situation. It could be explained only on the theory, which officials here emphatically do not believe, that the Kremlin wants a general war.

The likelier prospect, is a Soviet attempt at a settlement. And to get ready for such an attempt, the leading non-Soviet delegations here will speed up their consultations about Korea in the next few days.

In advance of such consultations with its partners, the United States already knows pretty clearly what kind of settlement it wants.

It will not be content with any arrangement that simply reestablishes a divided Korea. It will insist on free elections under U. N. supervision in the north as well as the south, as soon as the country has been pacified.

It probably will insist that surviving leaders of the North Korean government be barred from political life and proscribed as criminal aggressors, just as the surviving Nazi ministers were in Germany.

The United States and its leading Allies will be firm, moreover, in keeping the U. N. "seized" of the Korean question after the present crisis. The American, British and French foreign ministers gave a hint of this in their communique last night, when they announced that they had been discussing "the continuation of the U. N. interest in Korea after the termination of hostilities."

Finally, the United States hopes for quick action by the U. N. Assembly which starts its annual session Tuesday, to formulate peace aims for Korea. Either the United States or one of its Allies will propose setting up an assembly commission to recommend the steps by which Korea, North and South, can be made truly united and free, and restored to economic health and strength.

General Douglas MacArthur will need new authority from the U.N. before he can occupy North Korea for a temporary postwar period. But he is free to cross the Thirty-eighth Parallel, or to land on the North Korean coast, if he has to do so in his tactical operations before the fighting ends. This threat that overhangs the North Koreans is the surest reason why, officials believe, a decisive move from Moscow cannot be long delayed.

Acheson Asks German Units

of organization it should have a single over-all commander.

The U. S. Secretary made his proposal at the end of this afternoon's four-hour council session. Other ministers already had spoken and their reaction to his one-package plan — particularly to the idea of arming West German units—will not be fully known in the council until Saturday.

There is considerable optimism apparent among American diplomats that the idea will be accepted, though it might not be announced at once.

Acheson opened the meeting of the council this morning with a suggestion that the council probably would want to talk about mobilizing more men with guns who can defend freedom in Europe.

The other members of the council made their statements during the day and then Acheson capped the meeting with his proposal.

In making it, Acheson stressed that what the United States is interested in is an adequate build-up of total forces for western European defense.

The aim of the United States, he said, is to create a powerful will to resist aggression in the whole area of western Europe by providing the means of resistance.

Therefore, he continued, a half-way effort is not enough. He implied an "all or nothing" attitude on the part of the United States insofar as the assignment of American reinforcements to Europe is concerned. Diplomats said, however, that was mainly to stress the seriousness with which the American Government regards the situation.

On the part of the United States, Acheson said, the offer to assign a part of its military forces to an international command marks a revolutionary development in foreign policy and shows the extent to which this Nation is prepared to go.

With respect to Germany, Acheson said the United States believes the time has come for a decision in principle on the inclusion of German military units, and details can be worked out later. He declared the size of the task of defending western Europe is such that he sees no alternative to using all the troops that can be mustered.

In the event war broke out in Europe, Acheson continued, the Atlantic powers would be fighting as far east as possible, which would mean fighting on German soil, and the West Germans should have opportunities to defend their own territory, especially since forces from the other side of Germany presumably would be involved.

Then, answering objections to German rearmament which the French particularly have voiced, Acheson argued that use of German units would not mean creation of a national German army nor revival of a German general staff, nor would the Germans produce their own arms.

Automatic Arms Priority

Moreover, he said, they would be equipped with arms most useful in the integrated military force of which they would be a part.

The French also have raised objections to the idea of arming German forces until the Atlantic powers have produced more equipment for their own use. Acheson said the Atlantic powers have an automatic priority in arms because it would be many months before German units would be ready for combat equipment even if a decision in principle to employ such units was made at once.

Still another argument advanced against rearming West Germany is that such action might provoke Russia. Acheson replied by saying he did not see how inclusion of German units in a unified force could be more provocative than creation of the international force without Germany.

The critical thing, he said, is the buildup of the military power of the whole Western world and the West cannot remain weak because of fear Russia might be provoked.

told the Senate the disagreement over taxes made it impossible.

"We'll recess until Monday and see what happens then."

House-Senate debate on the Administration bill validating Gen. George C. Marshall's nomination for Secretary of Defense, meanwhile, prevented consideration of any other business yesterday.

Two Others In Conference

In addition to the tax bill, two other big bills, the McCarran-Wood anti-subversive measure and the 17-billion-dollar emergency rearmament legislation, were still in conference, and won't be reported until next week.

At least one of these, the Communist-control bill, may collide with a veto and hold Congress here longer.

An eleventh-hour Senate attempt to approve the House-passed Hawaii and Alaska Statehood bills may inject another delaying note late next week.

Story of Adoption Of Report on Color TV Is Corrected

The Radio-Television Manufacturers Association yesterday informed The Washington Post that an Associated Press story out of New York and a headline placed on this story by The Post were inaccurate in reporting a meeting of the RTMA Television Committee.

The RTMA stated that the committee did not "adopt (s) color video report" as reported in the headline, nor did it "adopt (ed) recommendations to fellow manufacturers on color video" as reported in the story.

RTMA, at the conclusion of the New York meeting, merely informed the press that the Television Committee approved certain recommendations which it would make to the RTMA board of directors next Wednesday and that until that time RTMA had no comment.

New Clubhouse Groundbreaking Set for Today

Ground will be broken Saturday at 6 p. m. for the new clubhouse for the Junior Police and Citizens Corps.

The clubhouse is to be located at Douglas and Stanton rds., se. G. Howland Shaw, president of the board of trustees of the corps, will turn the first dirt.

The project is estimated to cost less than $10,000 because of volunteer help from laborers, architects, carpenters, engineers and plumbers. The site was purchased by contributions from residents of the area. Final payment was made with a $2500 check from The Washington Post Celebrities Tournament Fund.

Marshall In China

It was inevitable that the 1945 mission of General Marshall to China would arise to plague his confirmation as Secretary of Defense. The year 1945 should be called "the year of the myth." In looking back upon it, it is necessary to realize that it was 1945, not 1950; and that in that year the Allies, so recently united on the battlefield, were trying to lay the foundations for a peaceful world. In that year there still remained in the Far East a oneness between Russia and the United States, though not in eastern Europe. At any rate, General Hurley testified before the Senate, December 6, 1945, "Our policy and the Russian-Chinese policy are in accord"—that is to say, the policy of unifying China.

What troubled the President in 1945 was that China seemed on the verge of an internal explosion. It was the assumption that an outbreak of civil war in China would imperil the general peace. So General Marshall was asked to mediate between the contenders, the Nationalists under Chiang Kai-shek and the Communists under Mao Tze-tung. It was a highminded, though a quixotic, mission, and General Marshall failed. The extreme wings of the two rivals let him down repeatedly. General Marshall's parting statement was an appeal to the moderates of both parties to detach themselves from the extremists and sink their differences under Chiang Kai-shek for the sake of internal peace. It was an appeal for a sort of Third Force to take over China, though it called for something that, as the world now knows, was unrealizable because of Communist intransigence and Chiang Kai-shek's megalomania. The generalissimo by that time had become the leader of the Kuomintang extremists. He had arrived at the "I am the government" stage in the mental development of dictators.

The case against General Marshall on the part of the Chiangists in Congress comes under several heads. He was the "dupe" of a "Red cell" in the State Department. That is to say, he had no mind of his own, and allowed the China experts in the State Department to write his instructions, which he forthwith carried out like an errand boy. On the face of it, this is absurd and worse. To say that a man of General Marshall's eminence was a tool of anybody, let alone secretaries in the diplomatic service—dishonorably called a "Red cell"—is to demean a great man.

Then General Marshall is called "naive." The naivete consisted of his effort to establish a Popular or United Front for the sake of peace without knowing that the Communists were real Reds out to gobble up Chiang Kai-shek and China. It is quite true that the Front was a Communist device adopted by the Comintern in 1935 for getting control from the inside of bourgeois parties and governments. It is also true that the Communists in China were one of the participants in that resolution. However, in 1945 most people took the dissolution of the Comintern at face value, and hoped that cooperation in war would spell cooperation in peace. Only a few wise men held up a warning finger. One was George F. Kennan, who, from Moscow, was telling the State Department not to share the ingenuousness of General Hurley (whose place as a pacificator General Marshall took) about Russian conduct anywhere, let alone in China. But on December 6, 1945, when General Hurley told the Senate such things as "Russia is not supporting the Chinese Communist Party," "Russia does not desire civil war in China," "Russia is playing on the level," "Russia has said from the beginning that the Chinese Communists are not in fact Communists at all," nobody in his audience thought he was naive.

None of these statements and nothing like them came out of General Marshall. Instead—on the basis, of course, of later experience—he said on leaving China, with some modesty: "I have never been in a position to be certain of the development of attitudes in the innermost Chinese Communist circles. Most certainly, the course which the Chinese Communist Party has pursued in recent months indicated an unwillingness to make a fair compromise." Yet the accusation is that he was bewitched into thinking that the Chinese Communists were a bunch of "agrarian reformers." (Incidentally, the agrarian reformer in chief is now reported to be Chiang Kai-shek himself, who is making the same changes in Formosa that Mao Tze-tung has been making in China, and is said to be so enthusiastic about results that he intends to remain an agrarian reformer when he returns to the mainland.) This implication arises out of what General Hurley said, not General Marshall. To what extent General Hurley was (eventually) right, time alone can tell; but it is ridiculous to go to the other extreme and regard the present China simply and solely and permanently as an extension of Russia, as the critics of General Marshall insist. That is simply to tie the hands of a diplomacy that should be concerned in driving a wedge between the two. Nothing should be inevitable to diplomacy, and the worst thing we could do is so to act as to keep on backing Mao Tze-tung more firmly into Stalin's arms.

When the Marshall mission blew up, credits were withdrawn from Chinag Kai-shek on General Marshall's recommendation, because he did not believe that the American people wished to subsidize civil war. The recommendation was accepted. It seems to us to have accorded not only with the best instincts of the American people but also with their best interests. From then on our policy should have been hands-off internal China except insofar as it was necessary to protect our own national interests in the Far East. Where General Marshall as Secretary of State erred, in our opinion, was in not refusing to be party to the military support or intervention that a Republican Congress voted in 1947 as a rider to the ECA. That policy not only blew up, but blew up with such a reverberating and shattering bang that our prestige was lowered all over Asia, and we have never recovered from the consequent confusion and loss of leadership.

Turning Point

It will be as difficult to restrain optimism over the news of the amphibious landings in Korea as it was to restrain the pessimism over the strategic withdrawal to defensible positions between the end of June and the end of last week. The Inchon operation looks promising, and General MacArthur's appearance on the scene adds to the pleasing prospect.

It was expected that something of the sort was in the breeze when on Wednesday General Walker said that the United Nations forces would soon take the offensive and that when they did he expected the Communist resistance to crumble rapidly. He was supported the next day by the Chief of Staff, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, who is not given to extravagance. Nevertheless, the implication that the United Nations now possesses sufficient strength for an offensive is, indeed, astonishing. The North Koreans are believed to have some 16 or 17 divisions, and it had been assumed that almost as many Allied divisions would be needed to drive the enemy behind the thirty-eighth parallel. There is certainly nothing like that strength present today, though the initial and tragic deficiency of weapons appears to have been overcome. It is possible that the factor upon which General Walker counted is a rapid deterioration of the enemy's forces, his reinforcements, and his supply depots. The end run at Inchon must be based upon that assumption—that the enemy has thrown his reserves into the struggle for Taegu.

There also remains the imponderable of Chinese and even Russian intervention. To our view, Chinese official intervention is unlikely, and, in that event, the Russians might, by analogy with the Berlin test, seek a way out of the impasse. But, whatever happens, it may happen quickly, and, if it is the liquidation of the aggression, the urgency of both the declaration of peace aims and the speeding up of a relief program is underlined. As soon as hostilities are over, Korea will be starving, for the rice harvest must have been ruined, and food ought to come along on the heels of the liberators in a land that lives from hand to mouth on the ragged edge of subsistence. On the political settlement Korea is one in the eyes of the United Nations, and plans need to be forwarded to hold an election without delay. The new tempo of the fighting ought to spur the United Nations, for it would be tragic to be as unprepared for the peace as we were unprepared for the war.

Vigilantes Of The Air

The president of the American Broadcasting Co., Robert E. Kintner, has shown how effective a bit of old-fashioned Americanism can be against the peculiarly nasty sort of vigilantism now rampant in the radio trade. Mr. Kintner quietly declined to be blackmailed into canceling a radio program starring Gypsy Rose Lee unless the Illinois Department of the American Legion could back up its charges that she was a Communist sympathizer. Miss Lee has signed an affidavit denying any Communist ties. "If you have any evidence to the contrary, please advise me," Mr. Kintner told the Legion official who had protested against Miss Lee's participation in the program.

The Legion official promptly backed down, having no evidence whatever beyond the unimpressive fact that Miss Lee was unfortunate enough to have her name included in an irresponsible blacklist called "Red Channels," put out by Counterattack, a newsletter purporting to supply "facts to combat communism." The "facts" supplied in the case of Miss Lee are these: that according to a book published in 1941 she was once a speaker at a meeting of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League; that according to the Daily Worker she served in 1942 as an "auctioneer" at a benefit books auction sale for the League of American Writers, International Labor Defense, and sent greetings in 1950 to a dinner in honor of Dr. Edward K. Barsky of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee; and that according to the New York Compass she was an entertainer at a carnival and dance of the New York Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. This is all the information supplied about Miss Lee.

To begin with, the information is uninteresting, if true. It happens that Miss Lee says it is not true—which, judging from the sources employed, seems highly possible. "I have absolute proof," she stated, "that I had nothing to do with those groups." However, we consider this beside the point. Even if the information were accurate, it would be without significance—save for the hit-and-run purposes of those who published it. By linking Miss Lee's name with "controversial" groups, they seek to make her a "controversial" personality—as they succeeded in doing with Miss Jean Muir—and thus to punish her for opinions and associations they dislike by destroying her professional career. They might have succeeded in this case, too, if the president of the ABC network had not refused to be intimidated by their tactics.

If these self-appointed policemen of the airwaves are allowed to have their way, we shall soon be able to see and hear only those entertainers who pass their bigoted censorship. Mr. Kintner deserves a grateful round of applause from the audience for pointing out, in effect, that this is the United States of America, not the Soviet Union.

District Defense

The District of Columbia's civil defense problem has been put back into rational perspective by the Senate's restoration of the full $290,000 fund requested for protection of this community. The House had cut the sum to $30,000. We hope that its conferees will recognize the validity and justice of the Senate's position on this and a number of other District appropriation items when the measure comes up for reconciliation of differences between the two chambers. After all, the people of Washington are asking only to be allowed to spend their own money for their own protection against air attack.

We think it a misfortune that the Senate failed to see the wisdom of providing funds for the dispersal of key Government agencies in accordance with the request submitted by President Truman. The President's plan is not only a wise form of insurance against the danger that bombing raids might paralyze essential defense operations, it is the crux of any program to prevent such raids on the Capital, since it would remove from the heart of the city the elements that make it an inviting target. Moreover, the plan would have great peacetime usefulness because it would advance the development of Washington along lines of sound city planning.

The failure to provide for dispersal of Federal agencies makes preparation against possible attack all the more imperative. Sensible preliminary plans have been made. But it is now necessary to establish a working organization capable of carrying the plans into effect. For this the $290,000 sought by the District Commissioners and allowed by the Senate is barely adequate. It would be the height of folly to leave this National Capital unprepared for a terrible contingency which we can hope will never arise but which we cannot rationally ignore.

Century Of "Harper's"

Uninterruptedly for a hundred years, Harper's magazine has presented its faithful subscribers with a choice monthly menu of provocative articles and distinguished fiction. The Library of Congress is now marking the publication's centennial with an exhibit titled "A Century of Harper's Magazine: 1850-1950." A complete collection of bound volumes of the magazine, together with more than 50 original drawings by its artists and a number of manuscripts and letters by its contributors and editors, will be on display. We join heartily in congratulations on the anniversary and in good wishes for Harper's second century.

In its early years, Harper's drew heavily on the great English Victorian writers—Dickens and Thackeray, Trollope and George Eliot among others. But more and more, and especially after the Civil War, it offered itself as a medium for the initial work of young native writers whose names are now renowned in American literature. Many of the delightful short stories of local color that depicted various regions of the United States first appeared in its pages. The display at the Library of Congress includes New England sketches by Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Sarah Orne Jewett and Mary Wilkins Freeman, and stories of the old South by George Washington Cable, Thomas Nelson Page and Joel Chandler Harris. William Dean Howell is also represented, and such an eminent Bostonian as Longfellow. The record is an illustrious one. And the vigor of Harper's appears to be increasing with age.

"And now, like quail, we spare an eye fo the hawk!
Like snakes themselves we must beware tl heel!
Like nervous monkeys, be alert or die!

"So be it," said Enrico, "Now, my brothers,
We grow as sharp as falcons, firm as bears,
Sure as mountain lions, devoted as bees.
Our many-eagled gaze is on the sky,
our killer whales are surly on the sea,
our fellows are muscled wolves in city and plain.

"We who were beasts so long turn beasts again.
But it's not the end. For we inherit strength rising, rising from the fear-filled jungles, rising, rising above all maddened hordes—
Egyptian, Roman, Hun; rising over
Demon and Disease and the scourge of Time.

"We'll stumble forward again beyond the beast:
upright we'll walk, two-legged decent men using the human cortex: we'll print another page for wonder in our history books."

JOHN RUSSELL McCARTHY.

"The Guilty"

I should like to make reference to the article written by Joseph Alsop which was published in The Washington Post on September 8, 1950. In this article entitled "The Guilty," Mr. Alsop, who has been on the spot in the action in Korea, made a commendable attempt to bring out into the open the truth about why we are suffering shocking losses. He seems to want to place the full responsibility on those politicians ". . . who defrauded the American people, claiming they were making America strong when they were making America weak." His article aroused my emotions. However, after considering his singular attacks on Truman and, in particular, Johnson, I do not think he has leveled his attack for truth in the place where it would do the most good.

Mr. Alsop's article does not tell the whole story or even approaches the "truth." What he says about Truman's "incurable loyalty to the third-rate" provides only the barest minimum about where the truth really lies behind our horrifying and catastrophic reverses in Korea.

We thinking Americans who are devoted to our country's democratic ideals and freedoms are now faced with a greater catastrophe than can be attributed to the actions of Truman and Johnson alone. We are in our present dilemma because peace-loving Americans have not had a meaningful foreign policy since the turn of the twentieth century. Our political leaders have not seen the light for 50 years and we are all to blame for that. Our political leaders almost led the people to catastrophe in World War II because neither the leaders nor the people could recognize the fact that in order to enjoy our rights and freedom we must pay the price for it. That price is quite simple to understand but it will not be understood unless sincere and honest political leaders are willing to place the interests of the people before the interests of political ambition. The price we must pay for our cherished way of life is the willingness and readiness of the people to stand up and fight for peace, and, if necessary, to die for peace.

Let us start at the beginning. Our mistakes of the past are as water over the dam. Let our leaders bring home to the people the full story of our vast commitments abroad and bring the people to realize that in order to safeguard our commitments and our way of life we must be willing to pay the supreme price. Let us clear away the cobwebs of slander and lies and bring truth to the people. Then perhaps our leaders will find that the American people will understand a call for armaments expenditures even during peaceful times if there is impending danger to our country. Then the people in the possession of truth, in justice and preparedness, shall choose rightly between peace and war.

Erratum

In the interest of clarity I should like to call to your attention a typographical error appearing in my recent letter on the Hager proposal. Readers of the letter may have been confused by the phrase "the translation of our professors into practice" which was printed incorrectly twice for my phrase "the translation of our professions into practice."

Nonsegregation Plan

I have read your editorial on "Swimming Pools" of September 10 and the success of the nonsegregation policy. I have read of Dr. Walter E. Hager's recommendation on merging of the two teachers' colleges, Miner, colored; Wilson, white. These two are significant events and facts against segregation in Washington, D. C. It shows that swimming can be conducted on a nonsegregated basis, with no violence, when proper planning and supervision are on hand.

Dr. Hager's recommendations for the merging of Miner and Wilson Teacher Colleges is the measured thinking of a competent educator on a situation where two colleges for teachers' training merged together would make one good, well-equipped, adequately staffed college. This would eliminate the fallacy of trying to provide separate but equal facilities. At present, neither gets what it needs, as he brought out in his report to the Board of Education.

Absentee Voting

Once more a national election year focuses attention on the voteless condition of the District of Columbia. Even though Washingtonians are without candidates, a ballot or a ballot box close at hand, many could vote in their home States if they knew the correct procedure.

The League of Women Voters of the District of Columbia has aided thousands of absentee voters during the past few years on the technicalities of registration, qualifications for voting, dates of primaries, and to whom and when to address requests for absentee ballots. Significant congressional roll calls are also available for reference. This year a desk has been set up in the lobby of the Star Building which will be open from 11 a. m. to 8 p. m. every Monday through Friday right up to a few days before the election. Thirty league members who have been extensively briefed on the election laws in the 48 States are taking turns at the desk and will give factual, nonpartisan information on the various elections.

For those who cannot visit the desk personally a special telephone has been installed and questions relating to the elections will be answered during the hours the desk is open. The telephone number is REpublic 0476.

"Anticommunism"

Regarding your editorial on "Anticommunism" of September 13, I wish you would quote the exact wording of the McCarran bill that "will hit a great many loyal and decent Americans who are guilty of nothing worse than the holding of unpopular opinions." Also please list the "certain distinctive American liberties" which it will hit.

From my reading of the bill it will do none of the things you claim. Unless you are are a member of a Communist political organization or Red front group you won't have to register; unless your literature is Communist propaganda you won't have to label it as such; unless you are a Communist you can hold a Federal job and obtain a passport; unless you conspire to establish a totalitarian dictatorship in the United States you will not have committed a crime in this field; unless as a Government employe you pass classified information to Communists or spies, or seek to obtain such, you are not penalized; unless you come from a country to which you cannot be returned if excluded from this country for subversion you can immigrate here; unless you are a deportable alien you cannot be jailed for six months or kept under supervision thereafter; unless you are a "second string" or "bogus" diplomat you are not subject to the deportation or exclusion laws; unless deportation proceedings are pending against you, you can be naturalized; unless you are unable to read, write and speak "simple English" you can petition for naturalization; unless you refuse to bear arms or perform noncombatant duties—if you have religious scruples—you can apply for naturalization; unless you join a subversive organization you cannot be "denaturalized," in a specified time; and the bill is careful not to abridge any rights guaranteed by the Fifth or Sixth Amendments to the Constitution and is otherwise amply hedged around with constitutional guarantees. To be sure Communists and potential saboteurs could be interned in time of war, invasion or insurrection. When 70 Senators vote for a measure which only 7 oppose, however, you can be sure it has a pretty strong popular support. If you imagine for one moment that you could get away with any of these things listed above in Red Russia, you are certainly greatly mistaken.

I feel that you have made one great mistake in regard to this bill. You have treated as though they were the same two entirely different things. The Communist Party is not a political party in the sense that the framers of the Constitution meant; a Red sympathizer cannot at the same time be a loyal American. In leaning over backward to protect our imaginary "distinctive American liberties" we must be careful that we don't fall flat on our laurels. REALIST.
Washington.

Editor's Note: We think our correspondent begs all the essential questions. It is precisely the difficulty of determining whether an individual is a member of a Communist political organization, whether a group is actually a "Red-front," whether literature is in fact "Communist propaganda" and what constitutes an attempt "to establish a totalitarian dictatorship" that makes the McCarran bill so dangerous. We do not "imagine for one moment that you could get away with any of these things" in Red Russia. It is because we should like the United States to remain very different from Red Russia that we wish Americans to be free to "get away," as our correspondent does, with any expression of opinion, no matter how much we, or he, may disagree with it. We are not in fear of the ideas of Communists—even if they should characterize as "imaginary" the "distinctive American liberties" under which the expression of their ideas is tolerated.

Louder Voice For The U. N.

By Malvina Lindsay

Best U. S. Strategy

HOWEVER GOOD this Nation may become on the propaganda front, it will yet be up against walls of suspicion in Asia and Africa, even in Europe. Hence part of its psychological offensive could well be to help strengthen the United Nations' facilities for informing the world truthfully of international doings.

The global groundswell of armament of the mind is being felt in the U. N. The General Assembly at its meeting beginning Tuesday is expected to consider expansion of information activities, including radio, films, publications, information centers and special services. A survey of U. N.'s public information program, made with assistance of advisory groups of regional experts, will be the basis of this discussion.

Recently on a Chicago University Roundtable program, Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff and Senator William Benton emphasized this country's interest in getting the U. N. story better told around the world by radio, television, movies. A more powerful "Voice of the United Nations" was as important as a U. N. police force General Sarnoff said.

The U. N. has great prestige in many parts of the world. In places where the news appetite for the trivial has not been whetted, people read eagerly of U. N. happenings, printed by handpresses, or listen to accounts sent by crude radio transmitters.

LAST YEAR global press and radio coverage of the U. N. was more extensive and more favorable than at any time since the San Francisco founding. The U. N.'s proposed program of technical aid for underdeveloped areas greatly increased interest among semi-colonial peoples. Now an Asian leader is a strong prospect for president of the next General Assembly. And because of Korea, Formosa, Indo-China, Asian eyes and ears are turned on Lake Success.

However, from all parts of the world, including the most remote, visitors, letters, research students come to the U. N. Handling these is one part of the U. N.'s information activities. The rate of visitors to Flushing Meadow, often 1000 a day, is expected to jump greatly when the organization moves to the big glass and marble secretariat building on East River.

Naturally the U. N.'s main information job is getting its news to outside information agencies. But it needs also to speak louder and stronger on its own to a world in which the distortion of news has become a major weapon of war.

Not only are millions in the world getting false reports of what goes on in the U. N., but, as the group of regional experts who helped in the information survey recently pointed out, a "spirit of disillusionment has penetrated the minds of people." Until recently there has been much defeatism, especially in this country and in western nations about the U. N.

NOW THE Korean war has sent up U. N. stock throughout the world, aroused new interest and new hope in its activities. Americans especially are recognizing that it is to their advantage to help maintain its prestige—also its survival. For hogtied as it may be by the veto, it provides a means by which the West can deal with and work with that part of the East outside the Iron Curtain.

The U. N. also represents a last hope to many peoples. Any decline in its prestige quickens fear and presages panic around the world. Not only interest but faith in it has been helped by its information program. Those Americans who find U. N. news dull compared with Hollywood divorces and campaign name calling little realize how widespread is interest in its activiites.

One of the weaknesses of the old League of Nations was that it had no such information facilities as has the U. N. to line up people's support behind it. It lacked radio, films, great nongovernmental organizations to tell its story. Woodrow Wilson, its chief evangel, had to take to the public platform.

Today every time a group of peace-minded individuals or even nations meet, a resolution certain to be adopted is one calling for a strengthening of the U. N. One way to pave the road for this strengthening is to help it to make itself better known and understood around the globe.

Degrading Congress

The second session of the Eighty-first Congress, now drawing to a close, sunk to a new low in the annals of American politics in the use of the floor of the Senate for purposes of character assassination. With perfect impunity Senators used their congressional immunity to impugn the loyalty of faithful executive officers and to smear innocent private citizens.

Senators McCarthy, Bridges and Schoeppel were the leading offenders in this desperate resort to political cannibalism. The effect of their contemptible tactics was to undermine public confidence in the Government of the United States at a critical juncture in the life of the Nation. Certain Senators did not hesitate to debase their integrity in this way and to degrade the dignity of Congress itself. In so doing they rendered a deep disservice to the people of the United States and went far to destroy faith in our representative form of government.

Rearming Germany

By Marquis Childs

Foreign Ministers Conference

NEW YORK.—The danger in any international conference is that the statesmen will lose their way in a forest of discussion, of whys and wherefores and whereases. Like Walter Mitty in James Thurber's famous story, they lapse more and more into a kind of dream world. They become, as someone once remarked about General MacArthur's capacity for drama, figments of their own imagination.

Childs

That is particularly true of the conferences now going on here. The decisions to be taken are so overwhelming. As Secretary of State Dean Acheson put it before he came to New York, the problems to be considered are such as would normally arise over a period of 50 or 75 years.

It is on Germany and German rearming that the tendency is strong to wander into the Walter Mitty twilight. A number of American politicians have long resided there. They have fostered the illusion that merely by the wave of a pen across a paper invincible German legions would come into being willing and even eager to fight for the West.

Europeans know so much more about the reality of Germany and the dubious state of mind of the German people. It has been tough-minded Robert Schuman, Foreign Minister of France, who has been pulling the Big Three back to earth on the issue of German rearmament.

TO ARM new French, British, American and Canadian divisions will take a capacity far beyond the combined resources of the West on the present half-war-half-peace basis. Therefore, why consider the immediate arming of German divisions as though they should take priority over those of other nations. This has been the core of Schuman's argument.

It is not that there is violent and acerb disagreement over Germany. The conference will not break up with Acheson and Schuman grappling in rage on a ledge of the Waldorf-Astoria Towers.

But the Secretary of State, with strong affirmation of John J. McCloy, American High Commissioner to West Germany, believes that now is the moment to fix the form of German military collaboration with the Atlantic powers. German opinion, so the argument runs, is malleable for the time being. The German people would be happy to accept partnership with the West. This last, in Schuman's view, is highly doubtful.

The immediate practical results that could flow out of this conference with respect to Germany are limited. They would seem to me to shape up more or less as follows:

1. A reactivation of German industry to produce a greatly increased volume not of guns and tanks but of the massive amounts of secondary material that goes into the equipment of modern divisions. This would include trucks, half-tracks and other vehicles. It would include uniforms, shoes, steel helmets.

In this way the slack of German industry would be taken up. German unemployment would be ended. Not merely the economy but the morale of West Germany would be enormously improved. This will take both planning and financing from the West.

2. Speeding up the expansion of a West German police force. It would be agreed, in principle, that this force would be primarily for maintaining internal security. Such a police force exists now in a nucleus of 10,000 men. This is over and above the separate police forces of the separate German states which would total 75,000 to 100,000.

AT A LATER Big Three meeting to be held within a few months this compromise can be reviewed. Until Germans are formed into platoons with weapons in their hands, the argument is largely academic.

It is not surprising that the "German question" should have taken up so much time in the discussions of the Foreign Ministers. The balance held by the present West German government is delicate and difficult. Beneath the surface in Germany forces are resurgent, bent on taking the German people back down the road of violence with Soviet Russia as a possible partner. And they are aided and abetted by other Germans who talk about neutrality with a "plague on both your houses."

The really important thing about this conference is that there is a will to get off the dead center of planning and more planning and into the stage of active preparation to fill the fearful vacuum of west Europe's defenses. There are varying degrees of this determination. But on the realistic goal of getting going there is honest agreement all around.

Bar Association Head Favors Registration of Communists

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

Harold J. Gallagher (left) with Arthur N. Carter of Canada

The President of the American Bar Association said yesterday he saw no reason why Communists should not be required to register with the Justice Department.

Harold Gallagher of New York, in town for the opening of the association convention Monday, declared that "we must deal with Communists realistically."

"Offhand," he asserted, "I see no reason why anyone shouldn't register"—as to whether he is or is not a Communist.

Gallagher, head of an organization of 43,000 lawyers, called upon all Americans to stop "taking liberty for granted — as something as free as the air." He urged "promotion of the ideals of American citizenship."

Speaks for Free Legal Aid

Turning to the legal field, the association head urged the bar to continue to develop programs of free legal aid for those who cannot afford it.

"One of the greatest opportunities of the bar is the obligation to see that all are provided with legal service," he said. His own tenure of office has been marked by attention to this subject.

Gallagher, former law partner of Wendell Willkie, heads a list of several thousand lawyers expected here for the annual convention. Over 3000 reservations have already been made by lawyers and their wives.

Also in town yesterday was Arthur N. Carter of Saint John, New Brunswick, president of the Canadian Bar Association, which will meet jointly with the American Association for the first time.

Carter said there are about 8000 "practicing lawyers" in Canada, with about half of them members of his association.

While the American Bar Association has 43,000 out of 160,000 lawyers in this country, its House of Delegates represents upward of 120,000 lawyers through membership of various State and local bar groups.

The colorful naturalization ceremony will be held at the local District Court today in connection with the meeting of the conference of Bar Association presidents. It is set for 9:30 a. m. in the Municipal Court Building with Judge Alexander Holtzoff presiding. Attorney General J. Howard McGrath will speak.

The ceremony, which has attracted Nationwide attention, is usually held on the second Tuesday of each month but will be held today especially for the Bar Presidents, a group organized last February under the auspices of the American Bar Association. The presidents will hold a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. at the Mayflower.

The taxation section of the association has scheduled its first general session at 10 a. m. at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Hazel Scott Denies Knowing Of Any Links to Communism

By the United Press

Pianist Hazel Scott went before the House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday, denied she was knowingly connected with the Communist Party, and asked for "protection" for her and "others unjustly accused."

Wife of Representative Adam Clayton Powell, jr. (D., N. Y.), she presented a prepared statement after Chairman John S. Wood (D., Ga.), said she would have to testify later because his other congressional duties were too pressing.

Miss Scott said she had been unjustly accused by the Counterattack, an anti-Communist publication, of having been connected with subversive organizations. She said the magazine listed her as a member of nine subversive groups labeled "Red Channels."

She said the list included "other prominent artists" and described "what purports to be their affiliations with Communist or pro-Communist organizations."

"It is the activity of counterattack which prompted me to ask for hearing," she said. "I, myself, am one of the victims of their technique of half-truth and guilt-by-listening. I feel it my duty to report the facts in my case. For what happens to me happens to others and is part of a pattern which could spread and really damage our national morale and security."

"I for one," she added, "am not ready to hand over America's entertainment industry to Moscow."

She acknowledged that she had appeared as an entertainer on programs of left-wing organizations but said "these were arranged by my former manager."

The magazine allegedly charged that Miss Scott once belonged to the American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born, the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, the "Civil Rights Congress, National Citizens Political Action Committee, Independent Citizens Committee, Artists Front to Win the War, Musicians Congress Committee, American Peace Mobilization in 1941, and the Progressive Citizens of America.

Miss Scott said her former manager may have "signed me up in some of these groups."

"I don't know that he did," she added. "I just know I never heard of them until recently."

"In 1946 I had become sufficiently alert to reject prospective Communist fronts. By then I had a manager who was more interested in furthering my career than in using my talents politically."

Max Lowenthal Heard Behind Closed Doors

The House Un-American Activities Committee questioned Max Lowenthal, New York author and attorney, for 2½ hours yesterday behind closed doors.

What he told the committee about the Communist Party, if anything, was not disclosed. Committee members and Lowenthal himself refused to comment.

Lowenthal's attorney, former Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, told reporters, however, that Lowenthal answered all questions.

Wheeler said some of the questions concerned a recent speech in the House by Representative Dondero (R., Mich.), who described Lowenthal as a man of great mystery."

Wheeler said Lowenthal was not asked whether he is a member of the Communist Party, but probably would have been glad to answer if he had been asked

Front" groups as "Communist organizations."

Members of either would be:

Denied passports as well as Federal and defense jobs.

Required to label their mail and broadcasts as "Disseminated by a Communist organization."

Barred from Federal income tax exemptions for organizational purposes.

The provisions would make it illegal for Government officials or employes or defense plant workers to contribute funds or services to a Communist organization.

Government employes would be specifically barred from passing on classified information to a member of a Communist organization, unless authorized by the head of a department, and it would be unlawful for Communists to receive such data.

A five-member Subversive Activities Conttrol Board, appointed by the President, would determine which organizations are "Communist Action" groups and which are "Communist Fronts."

Penalties of up to $10,000 or five years imprisonment could be assessed for violating the proposed law.

Left out of the Wood bill in the House, but added to it in conference, was the McCarran measure's so-called conspiracy section. This makes it a crime to knowingly conspire to perform any act which would substantially contribute to the establishment of a totalitarian dictatorship in the United States.

Among other McCarran bill provisions added in conference were sections sharply tightening the exclusion and deportation laws and naturalization procedures. Conferees said some of these were "watered down" however.

Administration proposals, extending the statute of limitations to 10 years for violations of the espionage act, requiring registration of foreign-trained spies and saboteurs, tightening the espionage statutes, and strengthening safeguards against sabotage of defense plants were retained in the bill.

Labor School, 'Front' Groups On Official Subversive List

By The Associated Press

Three schools have been designated by Attorney General McGrath as "adjuncts of the Communist Party."

They are:

Boston School for Marxist Studies, at Boston.

Joseph Weydemeyer School of Social Science, at St. Louis.

Pacific Northwest Labor School, at Seattle.

Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the Government's Loyalty Review Board, made public today McGrath's designation of the three schools, along with several other organizations.

Richardson had asked McGrath whether the Boston and Seattle schools were to be considered as adjuncts of the Communist Party. McGrath replied:

"A review of all the evidence available establishes that the Boston School for Marxist Studies is in fact an adjunct of the Communist Party; likewise that the Pacific Northwest Labor School was in effect but another name for the previously designated Seattle Labor School; and that the Joseph Weydemeyer School for Social Science in St. Louis is likewise a Communist school."

Other Groups Listed

Richardson also asked McGrath whether the previous designation of the International Workers Order as a Communist organization included, as well, the national group societies of the organization. McGrath said it did. To remove all doubt he specifically designated the following national group societies of the IWO.:

American-Russian Fraternal Society; Carpatho-Russian Peoples Society; Cervantes Fraternal Socety; Croatian Benevolent Fraternity; Finnish-American Mutual Aid Society; Garibaldi American Fraternal Society; Hellenic-American Brotherhood; Hungarian Brotherhood; Jewish Peoples Fraternal Order; Polonia Society of the IWO; Romanian-American Fraternal Society; Serbian-American Fraternal Society; Slovak Workers Society; Ukrainian-American Fraternal Union.

Replying to another question, McGrath said the designation of the Communist Political Association and the Communist Party, USA, includes all State, local, regional and other subdivisions. Therefore, said McGrath, the Peoples Educational and Press Association of Texas and the Virginia League for Peoples Education are included in the designation. Richardson had asked in particular about those two organizations.

The Partido del Pueblo of Panama, because of activities of its members in the Canal Zone, was placed on the Attorney General's subversive list. McGrath said the organization is operating as the Communist Party in Panama.

McGrath also designated the American branch of the Federation of Greek Maritime Unions as a Communist organization.

The Union of American Croatians went on the list. McGrath said this was the new name of the National Council of Americans of Croatian Descent, which was previously designated.

Associated Klans of America was added to Klan groups previously designated as groups advocating violence. Those already listed were the Ku Klux Klan; the Association of Georgia Klans; and the Original Southern Klans, Inc. McGrath said Associated Klans of America grew out of a merger of earlier Ku Klux Klan groups.

The Klan groups are listed as "having adopted a policy of advocating or approving the commission of acts of force or violence to deny others their rights under the Constitution."

Hickenlooper Delays O'Dwyer Confirmation

An objection by Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) last night delayed Senate action on the appointment of former Mayor O'Dwyer of New York City as Ambassador to Mexico.

Senator Lucas of Illinois, Democratic leader, served notice he will bring up the nomination Monday.

Hickenlooper objected to approval of the nomination by unanimous consent.

Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) told the Senate he shares the "reluctance" of some of his colleagues to approve the appointment, but announced he will not oppose it.

Pole Asks British Asylum

LONDON, Sept. 15 (AP).—A home office spokesman today announced that George Kostrzewa, chief of the Polish Purchasing Mission in Britain, has asked for political asylum. His application was reported filed after Warsaw ordered him home.

Cumberland Police Poised To Enforce Anti-Red Law

CUMBERLAND, Md., Sept. 15 (AP).—Two Communists and the Maryland Progressive Party today asked for an injunction against the city's new ordinance requiring Communists to register with the police.

It was not granted immediately, however, and the law becomes enforceable at midnight tonight.

Instead, Associated Judge George Henderson of the Allegany County Circuit Court gave the city until September 30 to answer why the injunction—temporary or permanent—should not be granted.

Police department officials declared tonight they are going to enforce the law to the letter. The ordinance provides a maximum penalty of $100 fine and 30 days in jail for Communist Party members who fail to register.

None had by early tonight. Special arrangements were made at the City Hall to permit any party members who wished to sign up until midnight.

Police Chief R. Emmett Flynn said flatly: "There are Communists in Cumberland that are known to the police, and we intend to weed them out." He added he will instruct all officers to bring in all known Communists unless he is stopped by the police commissioner.

It seems he won't be. Commissioner John J. Long said: "The ordinance regarding Communists was passed unanimously by the Mayor and City Council. Enforcement is the duty of the police department. As a freedom-loving American, as well as police commissioner, it is my privilege to see that the law is enforced to the letter."

Individuals listed on the suit were William Boyd Coleman and Arthur M. Schusterman—both self-admitted Communists—and Clair R. Mease.

Mease said he joined in the legal action because "the preservation of political liberty, including that of Communists, is important . . ."

The suit asked for the injunction on grounds the ordinance—which also forbids distribution of Communist literature—violates the Maryland Declaration of Rights and is contrary to the United States Constitution and "particularly the Fourteenth Amendment."

U. S. Awakening To Red Menace Noted by Editor

The most "striking change" in United States attitude during the past two years is our sudden "awakening to the danger of communism," Monty Radulovic, editor of the British magazine, "European Affairs," said yesterday.

Radulovic visited The Washington Post yesterday while in Washington. In this country about five weeks, he is making a six-month tour to gather material for a book on the postwar American attitude.

Born in Yugoslavia and now a British citizen, Radulovic thinks Europe and America "need some impartial reporting on each other if our differences are to be avoided." Communist propaganda about the United States, he said, "is not being fully answered today."

Acheson Picked Marshall As Pliable, McCarthy Says

BALTIMORE, Sept. 15 (AP).—Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) said tonight Secretary of State Acheson picked Gen. George C. Marshall as Secretary of Defense because Acheson "could control" him.

He described Marshall as a "soldier with an excellent war record, whose hatred of Chiang Kai-shek, unfortunately, is greater than his hatred for communism."

McCarthy spoke before an estimated 2000 persons at an affair sponsored by the Maryland departments of the Catholic War Veterans and the military order of the Purple Heart and a citizens committee

Almost simultaneously, Senator Tydings (D., Md.) was speaking over WBAL on a television network about McCarthy's charges that Communists had infiltrated the State Department. Tydings' speech was a paid political broadcast, carried over WBAL, Baltimore, and WTOP, Washington.

A Senate subcommittee headed by Tydings reported the charges were not supported by its investigation of them. Tydings is campaigning for renomination to his fifth consecutive term.

McCarthy's description of Marshall, who was named Tuesday by President Truman to succeed Louis Johnson, came during an attack on Acheson.

He said Acheson was blocked by United States military leaders in "his attempt to sell out Formosa."

But with the resignation of Johnson, "Acheson saw the light," McCarthy said.

His "task was to get a successor to Johnson who (1) could control those military leaders . . . and (2) whom Acheson could control."

In his speech Tydings said the FBI gave to his subcommittee its files on more than 80 persons described by McCarthy as Communists in the State Department.

He said he examined every one of these files before submitting the report of the five-man committee. Of the two Republican committee members, said Tydings, one examined nine files and the other 12.

Canadian 'AFL' Moves To Oust Communists

MONTREAL, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada amended its constitution today to require that affiliated unions oust any Communist officers or be dropped from the congress.

Delegates to the TLC's annual convention also wrote into the constitution a new clause barring Communist delegates from conventions at the discretion of the TLC executive council. The congress is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Family Service Group Formed

A Family Service Association of Northern Virginia was set up last night at a meeting of Arlington, Falls Church and Fairfax County citizens at the Arlington Public Health Department.

It is an enlargement of the Community Chest-supported Fairfax County School Committee which has been in existence for 10 years. The new group was established to provide thorough family services throughout the area.

Francis Palms, jr., of Vienna, presided at the meeting, which approved by-laws and elected a 30-member board of directors. Fifteen of the directors are from Arlington, three from Falls Church and 12 from Fairfax County.

It was announced the board will meet in the next 10 days to name its officers.

Palms said the meeting marked "an encouraging milestone in Northern Virginia's approach to its increasing welfare problems.

Yom Kippur to End Days of Penitence

When the sun sets Wednesday evening, candles will be kindled in thousands of Jewish homes in the Washington area.

It will be the eve of Yom Kippur, the most solemn of Jewish holidays, and the climax of 10 days of penitence following Rosh Hashonah.

Tradition prescribes the lighting of the 24-hour taper by the head of the house, in memory of the departed members of the family.

Festive meals are eaten the day before Yom Kippur, in anticipation of the 24 foodless hours to come.

Fulfilling an ancient injunction, the fast is an act of self-discipline, reminding Jews of their human frailty and of their dependence on God.

Oral Confession

An oral confession of one's sins precedes the final meal of the day, after which the candle is lighted and the family prepares its synagogue or temple.

There, the service opens with the Kol Nidre chant, described as the most haunting melody in the entire religious experience of the Jews. It is a prayer calling for release from unfulfilled vows made to God during the past year.

After the evening service, most Jews go home, until the following day when they return at dawn and stay to sundown.

The Day of Atonement is a day not only for repentance for trespasses against ceremonial law, but also more especially for ethical conduct in relations between men.

Prayers Uninterrupted

The prayers are so arranged that they continue uninterruptedly from their beginning in the morning until the end, at the "neilah" service after sunset.

At each service, there is a confession of sins and a prayer of forgiveness.

During the additional prayer of the morning a reenactment of the ancient service at the Temple is presented. In the course of it the members—or at least the elders of the congregation — prostrate themselves four times.

The melodies of each of the services follow definite traditions and reflect the mood in which the ceremony is expected to be pronounced.

At the moment of the sun's setting, a single blast of the shofar, or ram's horn, is heard, bringing Yom Kippur to an end, with a joint cry by all in the congregation, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord is our God, the Lord is One."

Special Score Composed For Atonement Day

The Day of Atonement service of the Washington Hebrew Congregation will feature a specially composed score directed by its author.

Dr. Eric Werner, head of the department of sacred music at Hebrew Union College, will conduct his music Wednesday evening and Thursday afternoon at Constitution Hall.

Friends Plan Session

The Baltimore and Sandy Springs Society of Friends will conduct a joint quarterly meeting Sunday at 11 a. m. in the Sandy Springs meeting house. E. Raymond Wilson, member of the Friends' Committee on national legislation, will speak at the afternoon session.

Special Service

Dr. Rustin Farewell Scheduled

Tributes to the Rev. John W. Rustin—who is leaving Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church after 14 years—will be voiced by four leading ministers at Sunday night's regular family worship hour at the church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Those speaking on the program starting at 6:45 p. m. will be the Rev. Oscar Blackwelder, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol; the Rev. Edward Hughes Pruden, minister of the First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw.; the Rev. Carl Heath Kopf, minister of the First Congregational Church, 939 G st. nw., and Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, minister of Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw.

The Angelus Acapella Choir of the church will present special music selected by Dr. Rustin.

An informal reception will follow in the social hall of the church.

Dr. Rustin will preach his final sermons at 9 and 11:15 a. m. Sunday. His topic will be "The Church in Tomorrow's World."

He was recently appointed to the pastorate of Belmont Methodist Church in Nashville, Tenn., and will leave early next week to assume his new duties.

During his term, Dr. Rustin has built the Mount Vernon Place church up into one of the largest and most active Protestant churches in this section of the country.

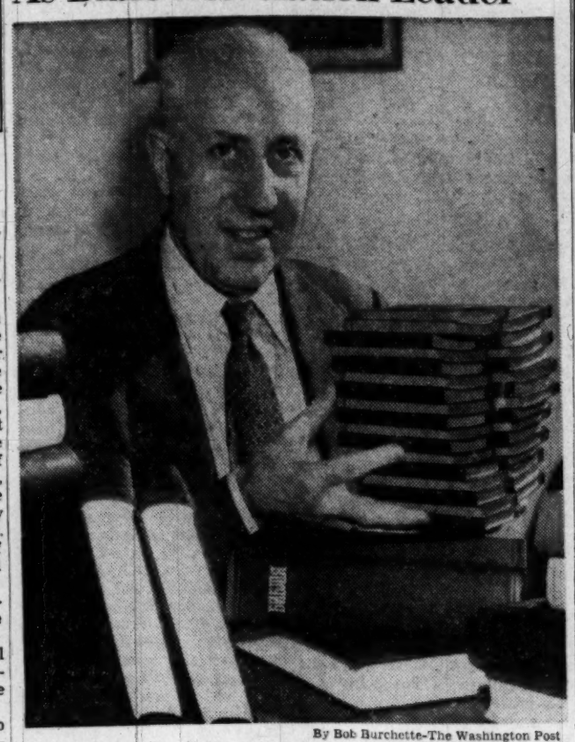
The new pastor of the church will be Dr. Albert P. Shirkey of St. Paul's Methodist Church, Houston, Tex., who is expected to take over in the middle of October.

Cornerstone Laying Set for Church Home

The laying of the cornerstone for the new $400,000 Homewood Church home, 2 miles south of Hagerstown on Route 11, will be held Sunday at 3 p. m.

The Rev. Gottlieb Siegenthaler of Baltimore, president of the Potomac Synod of the Evangelican and Reformed Churches, will be the chief speaker. Homewood is a benevolent institution of the Evangelican and Reformed Church.

Dr. Etchison Finds a Career As Bible Association Leader



By Bob Burchette-The Washington Post

Dr. Page McK. Etchison, cofounder of Bible group in 1922

Like clockwork, the name of Dr. Page McK. Etchison has popped up in print once a year for the past two decades. Each time he has been reelected as president of the Organized Bible Class Association of Washington.

"It gets kind of embarrassing, too," Dr. Etchison, a life-long Republican, said. "My friends point out that I have now outrun Roosevelt."

What's more, the balding, 57-year-old, still athletic-appearing former YMCA religious work director thinks he'll probably keep on being president until he dies.

A Cofounder

Dr. Etchison was a cofounder of the group 28 years ago. Its first president was Homer J. Councilor, the other founder who was also in YMCA work. Upon Councilor's death in 1931, Dr. Etchison stepped up from the executive director job to the presidency.

"Actually, its been fine for all concerned," Dr. Etchison observed. "I have three jobs that dovetail as one. As field secretary of the America Bible Association and executive director of the Washington City Bible Society, I rate an office with equipment which can be used as headquarters for the OBCA."

However, he draws pay only for his work with the ABA.

For Dr. Etchison, the growth of the Bible Class Association has been phenomenal.

"The first meeting in 1922 was attended by 22 delegates representing 12 Bible classes. Our last one, held two weeks ago on the campus of Western Maryland College, was attended by more than 500 delegates representing 65 churches.

18,000 Members

The association's membership totals an impressive 18,000 in 225 city-wide Bible classes.

"The group exists to stimulate the work of Bible classes," he said. "We do it anyway we can. We provide speakers, material, organizers, promotion and set up a series of Bible class meeting throughout the year."

The association, however, is actually one in name only. It has no constitution or by-laws, and is governed, Dr. Etchison said, by "an unwritten constitution." There are no initiation fees or dues.

A native of Jefferson, Md., Dr. Etchison was graduated from George Washington University; received his B.S.L. from Southeastern University, and his honorary L.H.D. from Salem College, West Virginia. He is a member and on the board of the Hamline Methodist Church and lives at 3730 Appleton st. nw.

Of Parish Hall

Bishop Dun Will Aid in Dedication

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, will help dedicate Trinity Episcopal Church's $150,000 parish hall Sunday.

He will be assisted by the rector, the Rev. Robert S. Trenbath, in ceremonies following the 11 a. m. service at the church, 7005 Piney Branch rd. nw. Bishop Dun will preach at the service.

The combined senior and junior choirs of more than 60 voices will lead the music for the occasion. Soloists will be Wilson Ewart of the Australian Embassy, baritone, and Robert Gasser, of the National Symphony Orchestra, trumpeter. Emily E. P. Pearse will direct the choirs.

The building, erected on the site of an old one, contains on the first floor an aduitorium that will seat 350 people, a modern kitchen serving more than 500 persons, two offices for the rectory and the secretary, a dressing room for the stage, and lavatories.

In the basement are eight classrooms, two large kindergarten room,s a parlor and kitchenette, choir room, sexton's room and lavatories.

J. C. Runyon of 503 N. West st., Falls Church, headed the building committee. Other members are Edward J. Waterfield, 13 McDonald pl. ne., senior warden; Richard K. Smith of 12 Sunnyside rd., Silver Spring, and Dr. Edward J. Copping of 7210 Blair rd. nw.

Baptism to Use Water From River of Jordan

Always with a flair for the dramatic, Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux, pastor of the Radio Church of God, will conduct a mass baptismal Sunday night in water shipped for the occasion from the River of Jordan.

The ceremony will be held in a large improvised tank erected on the diamond at Griffith Stadium.

5000 Signatures Sought in Churches

Five thousand petitions are being distributed in local churches Sunday to gather women's signatures for the Ecumenical Register of Church Women.

The registration project is planned as a demonstration of women's interest in the ecumenical church, "the whole church in the whole world," Mrs. W. N. Street, president of the sponsoring Washington Council of Church Women, said. A Nation-wide goal of one million signatures has been set.

Mr. Ambler To Be Rector In Alexandria

The Rev. J. Jacquelin Ambler will assume his duties as rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church. Russell rd. and Mason ave., Alexandria, Sunday, with holy communion at 8 a. m. and morning prayer at 11 a. m.

The 48-year-old pastor comes to Emmanuel from Pinkney Memorial Church, Hyattsville, where he was rector from 1944. A native of Amherst, Va., Mr. Ambler was graduated from William and Mary and the Virginia Theological Seminary, and was ordained as deacon in 1928 and as priest in 1929. He was rector of Trinity Church, Fredericksburg, Va., for nine years before going t oHyattsville.

He succeeds the Rev. William Macbeth, who resigned in July to accept a teaching post at St. George's School, Newport, R. I.

Mr. Ambler is a member of the executive council of the Diocese of Washington, a member of the department of missions, dean of the Northern Convocation and a member of the committee on records of the diocese.

St. John's Will Dedicate School Sunday

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington, will officiate at dedication ceremonies for the $210,000 St. John's Parochial School, 10501 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, at 4 p. m. Sunday.

Aiding in the ceremony will be the Rev. Joseph T. Kennedy, pastor of St. John's Parish, and the Rev. Francis J. Veith, his assistant. The sermon will be preached by the Very Rev. Msgr. John S. Spence, director of education for the archdiocese. Afterwards, Archbishop O'Boyle will celebrate the benediction of the blessed sacrament in the school auditorium.

Of contemporary design, the one-story brick structure contains 10 classrooms, a kindergarten and an auditorium seating 500 persons.

The Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, from Scranton, Pa., will teach, with Mother Mary Amata, I. M., principal.

Tobey Denies He Ever Said GOP Is Dead

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 15 (AP). United States Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) today repudiated a statement attributed to him in which he was quoted as saying "the old Republican Party is dead."

The Senator, on the heels of his close victory in Tuesday's primary, was interviewed by a Boston reporter. Newspapers published a quotation attributed to the Senator which said:

"The old Republican Party is dead. It is dead because it cannot and will not learn."

Tobey, in a statement issued by his Concord office, denied he ever made such a statement even in post-primary excitement. He said it was called to his attention by the "completely misleading headlines."

"What I have said many times and what I say now is that it is essential that the Republican Party clean house in Washington," the Tobey statement read. "It is essential that the Republican Party have a victory in the national election in 1952, and this can be accomplished only by a forward-looking Republican philosophy.

River Pollution Study Set

OAKLAND, Md., Sept. 15 (AP)—The Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin will meet here for two days next week, with the pollution of the section upstream from Cumberland getting priority attention.

Members of the commission also will make an inspection trip to the Savage River Dam project, now being pushed toward completion after a long interruption.

Election of officers also is on the agenda.

It is the ninth annual meeting of the commission and starts next Thursday night with a dinner, to be followed by a closed session at which the members will discuss the report of their future planning committee.

The attention turns to upper Potomac pollution problems at an open session Friday morning. Oliver Gasch, chairman of the public relations committee, will preside over a round table discussion on the subject. Participants will include representatives from the City of Cumberland, the Allegany County Sewer Authority, the Lavale Sewer District, and industries in the area.

An official from the U. S. Public Health Service will talk at the noon luncheon on the importance of the sanitary engineer in civilian defense.

The business session, with election of officers, is scheduled for Saturday morning. The Saturday afternoon tour will include an inspection of pollution conditions in the north branch of the Potomac near Cumberland as well as the Savage River Dam.

Among Catholics

Episcopal Report Lists Conversions

NEW YORK, Sept. 15 (NHYT). In 10 years 26,242 adult Roman Catholics have been received into the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, its possessions, Cuba, the Dominican Republic and Haiti, the Rev. Drank L. Carruthers, Newburgh, N. Y., and the Rt. Rev. S. Harrington Littell, retired Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Honolulu, reported today.

The report, said to be the first inclusive one ever made on the subject, is in the current issue of the Living Church, official weekly of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The authors said it was made to try to determine impartially whether, as some have claimed, "the church of Rome is making great inroads upon not only our membership, but upon the membership of non-Roman communions and denominations," or whether, as claimed recently by the Archbishop of York, there is a "continuous stream of those who are leaving Rome and looking elsewhere for their spiritual home."

Bishop Littell and Mr. Carruthers said they had no way of finding out how many Episcopalians had joined the Roman Catholic communion. An informal survey among rectors of large parishes in New York indicated, they added, th Episcopal Church gains 10 for each one lost.

Only adult Roman Catholics brought into the Episcopal church "by formal reception of a bishop" were included in the survey, its authors said. Children baptized as Roman Catholics but who grew up and were confirmed in the Episcopal church were not included. The authors indicated that if these had been counted the total would have been doubled.

Fourteen Roman Catholic priests were also received into the Episcopal Church in an "active pastoral relationship," the report said.

Consecration Service To Be on Television

Consecration ceremonies for the Most Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, rector of the Catholic University of America, who will be made titular Bishop of Atenia and auxiliary Bishop of the Archdiocese of Washington Thursday, will be televised.

The Right Rev Msgr. Edward B. Jordan, vice rector of the university, and general chairman in charge of the ceremonies, said the consecration will be seen over WNBW (Channel 4) beginning at 10 a. m. It will take place in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at the university.

Specialists Help Utica Fight Polio

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 15 (AP).—A team of polio-fighting specialists arrived here today to combat an outbreak which has caused 11 deaths, 5 in the past 3 days.

An epidemic team from Harvard University and specialists from Boston, Mass., and Rochester, N. Y., arrived as 74 persons were reported under treatment at Children's Hospital. Seven were in iron lungs borrowed from Schenectady and Poughkeepsie hospitals.

The hospital has admitted 129 patients in the past several months. Eleven have died.

The specialists, dispatched by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, will help treat the most serious cases.

Four victims died Wednesday. Despite the high incidence of the disease, authorities agreed it would not be necessary to close schools.

Meanwhile, in New York, the National Foundation said 1950 might be the second worst polio year in this country's history.

Three New Polio Cases Reported in D. C. Area

Three new cases of poliomyelitis were reported yesterday in the Washington area, increasing the year's total to 280.

The District Health Department reported a 21-months-old girl of the 2900 block of Nash pl., se., was admitted tot Children's Hospital September 14. It was the city's 118th case as compared with 65 at this time last year.

The other two cases were reported by the Montgomery and Prince Georges County Health Departments. Prince Georges County's forty-ninth case was a 27-year-old woman of the 8100 block of Takoma dr., Takoma Park, Md., who is being treated at Gallinger Hospital. Montgomery's forty-fourth case was a 28-year-old man of the 4400 block of Garrett Park rd., Viers Mill Village, Md., admitted to Mount Alto Hospital September 14.

National Bible Week Planned in October

National Bible Week is scheduled October 16-22 this year, according to word from the Laymen's National Committee in New York City.

The committee, which sponsors the yearly event, asks everyone "to make it an occasion for special prayer, a period to collect our thoughts, to marshal our hopes and to plant in our hearts a strong belief in our American way of life."

Children's Rally Set

A children's rally under the direction of the Rev. Winfield Ruelke, director of the Child Evangelism Fellowship for the New York City area, will be held Thursday at 4 p. m. at the Metropolitan Baptist Church, 20 6th st. ne.

Business Law Code Nearing Completion

The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws yesterday moved nearer to final action on its most monumental work—the Uniform Commercial Code.

The commissioners, now meeting at the Statler, have been working on the code for 10 years. It is "the size of a Sears Roebuck catalog," one member said. Briefly, it consists of:

An act to modernize the Negotiable Instruments Act, the Sales Act and all the commercial acts which have been in force for a great number of years in this country. It would cover the whole mammoth range of commercial transactions, including checks, bills, notes, warehouse receipts, etc.

The commissioners devoted most of yesterday to consideration of the code and will devote nearly all of today to it. The proposal code is expected to come to a vote at the September 1951 meeting.

After that an effort will be made to get the code adopted by Legislatures of all the States.

The conference, which has been meeting here since Monday, concludes its sessions tdday.

Court to Get Arlington Funds Fight

The tussle between Arlington Treasurer John Locke Green and the county school board over Green's refusal to release funds for purchase of a $288,000 school warehouse may be settled in Arlington Circuit Court.

The school board yesterday appointed Attorney Lawrence Douglas to represent it in the matter. It asked him to seek a court order restraining Treasurer Green from blocking the funds.

Green objects to purchase of the warehouse—to be used for shops, offices, and storage—because he says bond funds earmarked for the project were not intended for such a purpose when voted in a 1948 referendum.

Green refused to release the $288,000 this week despite the opinion of Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker that use of the bond money would be legal.

Prince Georges Democratic 'Ins' Challenged In Primaries for Sheriff and Orphans' Court

Democratic imcumbents on the Orphan's Court bench and in the sheriff's office in Prince Georges County face opposition from independent candidates in Monday's primary elections.

Seeking reelection as judges of the Orphan's Court are Chief Judge William T. McPherson and Associate Judges Lansdale G. Clagett and Vincent A. Osterman. Running in opposition is a lone independent, Charles F. Luebner.

Sheriff T. Ward Martin is opposed by Maxwell H. Black in his bid for reelection.

Judge McPherson, who is cashier of the Bank of Brandywine, has served one full term and a part of another. He was first appointed to fill out the unexpired term of Judge Millard Thorne. His home is in Brandywine.

Was State Delegate

Judge Clagett, who also was first appointed to fill a vacancy, has served on the bench for two full terms. He succeeded to the seat held by Judge Philip Miller. A member of the House of Delegates for two terms beginning in 1930, he is in the insurance business in Marlboro and also owns the Marlboro Hardware and Supply Co. A lifelong resident of Marlboro, he is 39 years old.

Judge Osterman has served three terms. A retired District policeman, he was also a Bladensburg town commissioner for six years. Active in patriotic work of the United Spanish War Veterans, he lives at 4912 Annapolis rd., Bladensburg.

Luebner, a retired Government worker and onetime real estate dealer and builder, has long been active in civic work in the county. He was an unsuccessful candidate for the House of Delegates in 1946. He was a leader in the movement which produced flood control measures to relieve high water in the Bladensburg area. He lives at 4309 Sheridan st., University Park.

Martin, under a recent act of the Maryland General Assembly, is the first sheriff eligible to succeed himself. Hertofore, sheriffs were limited to one term. Custom dictated that the chief deputy be nominated, and—in the predominantly Democratic county—elected to the office.

Elected to the post in 1946, Martin served four years as chief deputy. A tobacco grower on his North Keys farm, Martin has been an automobile salesman, State Roads Commission foreman and sales clerk at the Waldorf Tobacco Warehouse. He is 57 years old.

Black, an accountant and auditor for the General Accounting Office for 17 years, retired June 24 to campaign for this office. Residing at 328 Woodland rd., Morningside, he has been active in civic affairs of the community and in the Parent-Teacher Association. He is 47 years old.

Hawes Favors College Course For Policemen

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va., Sept. 15 (AP). — Inspector Russell A. Hawes of the Alexandria Police Department expressed hope today that colleges some day "will graduate young men with degrees entitling them take over the duties of policemen, just as degrees are required for lawyers and doctors."

"I expect my ideas on this subject are too visionary," he said, "but our present police system is outmoded and efforts should be made to put it on the same high plane as the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the finest law enforcement organization in the world."

Hawes addressed the annual convention of the Virginia Association of Chiefs of Police.

Suffolk Police Chief L. P. Butler was elected president of the association today.

Tigers Whip Yanks, Regain Lead; Bosox Win, 12-9

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

DETROIT, Sept. 15.—There was some fraternizing by a couple of Detroit and Yankee players before today's game in bold defiance of the rule against getting too chummy. But Freddie Hutchinson of the Tigers and Tommy Henrich of the Yanks had a special motive for their confab.

They weren't passing the time of day or making small talk.

Povich

They were making big talk, aimed at getting a big hunk of that $800,000 the television sponsors are paying the club owners for the video rights to the World Series. Hutchinson is the spokesman for the American League Players Committee. Henrich is chairman of the Yankee Players.

To reporters, Hutchinson talked freely. "Sure, we want some of that money. We'll ask them nicely, at first, and get tough later, if we have to."

Hutchinson was quoted in the morning papers to the effect that the Players Committee would let the whole thing ride until next year. "I was misquoted," he said. "We want our share whenever they get theirs, and we'll put it up to them during the World Series."

How much did Hutchinson think the players would ask for? "Oh, about 50 percent of what's left after the pension fund money comes off the top." Would the players stick with their committee's demands? Said Hutchinson: "We've never been so unified."

YANKEE OWNER Del Webb, here for the crucial series with the Tigers, was still aglow after that Yankee victory in the first game when he heard the joyful news that the Red Sox had dropped a 6-3 game to the seventh-place Browns.

"That's eight straight wins for the Browns," ejaculated Webb. "Those wonderful fools must think this is a seven-club pennant race."

GOING INTO TODAY'S game, the Yankees had won six out of their last seven and all without the benefit of batting practice, so dismal was the weather that the diamonds were covered until game time. Thus it was that Casey Stengel said his misgivings today when the sun came out and the Yankees took their first pregame hitting drill in a week.

"If I was smart," said Stengel, "I'd probably call our batting practice off."

STENGEL WAS gentle with Leftfielder Hank Bauer who misjudged Don Kolloway's line drive two bagger against the leftfield wall yesterday. "Sure, Bauer misjudged it. I misjudged it, and so did the other 20,000 people in the park" said Stengel. "Whoever thought any hitter could bang a line drive that far against that wind."

TOMMY BYRNE was somewhat exasperated in the first inning by Gerry Priddy today, just before Priddy walloped his two-run homer into the left field stands. With the count 2 and 1, Priddy stepped out of the batters' box three times causing Byrne to check his windup and fiddling while Byrne burned.

JOHNNY MIZE, who hits the most effortless homeruns, simply softstroked two of his three today into the third deck of right field which few hitters reach with all-out swings. Mize makes it look so easy, you wonder how far he could hit a ball if he really put his heart in it. His third homer was a comparative bunt into the second deck.

THERE WAS SCURRYING for the record books when it was announced that Mize was the first man in history to hit three home runs six times in a career. Then ensued a lively interrogation of the press box historian:

"Who besides Mize ever did it five times?"

"Nobody."

"Who besides Mize ever hit three in a single game four times?"

"Nobody."

Thus was Mize's fame securely established.

AND IF YOU'D like to have your clothes fitted by the only man ever to bang out three homers in six different games, Mize has now made even that possible. This week he accepted the vice presidency of the Madison Avenue firm of Paul Rorman, Ltd, "Gentlemen's Tailors." A long haul from his barefoot days in Demerest, Jawjah.

YANKEE PITCHERS acted as if they were trying to win the pennant frfom George Kell, personally. Tommy Byrne almost sheared Kell's head off with a dust-off pitch in the first inning and Allie Reynolds sent the Tigers' top hitter sprawling in the sixth. If it was accidental, it was a long coincidence.

HOW HOME-TOWNISH can you be? With the Tigers desperately trying to hold on to a two-run lead in the eighth, the fans nevertheless poured on the applause for Mize when the big Yankee came up for his fourth batting turn.

And then he did the nice thing for Detroit fans by striking out on a 3-2 pitch.

Mize Belts 3 Homers, Bats In 6 Runs as N. Y. Bows

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

DETROIT, Sept. 15.—Unyielding in the face of a murderous assault on their pitching by Johny Mize—three home runs in his first three times at bat—the Tigers battled their way back to the top of the American League today with a 9-7 victory over the Yankees.

In the first, fourth and fifth innings the 37-year-old free-swinging Mize pumped homers into right field ramparts to drive in all but one of the Yankee runs of the day, but today the Tigers were not to be licked by men or Mize.

They drove starter Tommy Byrne off the scene in the second inning and they unloaded against his successor, Allie Reynolds, for the winning runs in the sixth to wipe out a 7-5 lead the Yankees had established on Mize's third homer, a two-run clout in the fifth.

And at the finish, it was Hank Borowy, an old Yankee, who was in there containing the Yankee bats with a splendid four-inning relief hitch after replacing the hapless Art Houtteman, vicim of all three of Mize's clouts.

By a half-game margin the Tigers reclaimed the league lead they had lost to the Yankees yesterday and averted what threatened to be a walk-away drive by the New York club. The revised standings now show:

	W	L	Pct.	G.B.
Detroit	88	50	.638
New York	88	51	.633	½
Boston	87	52	.626	1½

When Mize wasn't hitting home runs for the Yankees, they were a feeble outfit. They got their first run before the big fellow had a chance to hit in the opening inning, but after that every run they scored stemmed from the stick of Mize, who was hitting three homers in a game for the sixth time in his career.

Mize was breaking his own record of five three-homer games, and it stands out in bolder relief against the fact that none in the long history of the game ever homered thrice more than three times.

The Tigers found succor from the threat of Mize's big bat when Manager Red Rolfe called on ex-Yankee Borowy to take over at the start of the sixth. Borowy, a refugee from the Pirates in midseason, held the Yankees to one more hit in the last four innings, and in his lone task against Mize he struck the big guy out on a 3-2 pitch.

Save for Mize's awesome demonstration, the Yankees looked like no champions, incipient or otherwise. The Tigers stole two decisive runs from the New Yorkers when Second Baseman Gerry Coleman loafed on a hit in the Church, Hit by Pitch, Undergoes Plastic Surgery

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15 (AP).—Emory (Bubba) Church, Philadelphia Phillies' rookie right-handed pitcher hit by a batted ball tonight, will undergo plastic surgery tomorrow at Jefferson Hospital.

Church was struck beneath the left eye by a ball off the bat of Ted Kluszwski, of Cincinnati, in the third inning of the first game of a doubleheader. Four stitches were necessary to close the wound.

A hospital spokesman said the institution's chief plastic surgeon will perform the operation. He declined to say, however, how long the young hurler might be out of action. An X-ray examination showed no fractures or damage to the nerves, the hospital spokesman said.

Phils Take 2; Second Goes 19 Innings

Philadelphia, Sept. 16 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies fought from behind twice tonight to win the longest game of the season from the Cincinnati Reds, 8-7, in 19 innings, on Del Ennis' bases-loaded single, after grabbing the opening game of a twi-night twin bill, 2-1.

Dente Hits Homer as Nats Split

Special to The Washington Post.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 15.—Sam Dente hit a home run tonight, his second in two years, and the Nats celebrated the rare occasion by beating the Indians in the second game of a twi-night doubleheader to snap their six-game losing streak.

Dente's blow was the feature of the 4-1 victory in the afterpiece while Luke Easter's twenty-sixth homer, clipped in the ninth inning, produced a 4-2 success for the Indians in the opener.

Sid Hudson, going he distance, posted his thirteenth triumph against a like number of defeats in the second game. The Washington victory was only the second scored in Cleveland this season, and only 11,471 spectators, one of the smallest night gatherings in the town's baseball history, turned out for the bargain bill.

Al Aber, rookie lefthander from Oklahoma City making his major-league debut, hurled the Cleveland victory, outperforming righthander Julio Moreno and Mickey Harris, who was charged with the defeat when Easter tagged him for a two-run homer in the ninth.

Ted Williams Belts Homer As Browns' Streak Ends

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 15 (AP).—Ted Williams returned to action and demonstrated his physical fitness today by slamming out four hits, including a three-run homer, as the pennant-seeking Boston Red Sox overpowered the St. Louis Browns, 12-9.

Thus Steve O'Neill's musclemen advanced to within one and a half games of the Detroit Tigers, who took over first place by downing New York.

The Boston triumph also snapped an eight-game winning streak by the Browns.

Williams, highest-paid player in baseball, had seen action only as a pinch-batter since he fractured his left elbow in the July All-Star game at Chicago. He had three singles to go with his homer in six trips.

With Williams taking over in left field, Goodman moved to third base and Johnny Pesky was benched. Pesky, hitting .313, suggested the move to O'Neill so that the valuable Goodman, batting .360, could remain in the lineup.

Manager O'Neill, jubilant in the clubhouse after the game, said Williams should be credited for the important victory.

"He hit the ball hard all day and as far as I'm concerned, he meant the difference," said O'Neill.

VPI's Hopes Rest On Sterling Wingo

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

BLACKSBURG, Va., Sept. 15—For two years, Virginia Tech's Gobblers have been out of step with the National Collegiate Athletic Association's so-called Sanity Code, and all it has netted them is one victory, three ties and 16 losses.

Tech is contemplating no change in its way of doing things. It has advised the NCAA that it cannot provide jobs for its scholarship athletes because they are already overburdened with the military program, studies and athletics.

Bob McNeish

However, Coach Bob McNeish believes he is ready to improve on Tech's football record by 300 percent this season.

He has nine seniors in his starting eleven. The other two are juniors. To back them up, he has last year's good freshmen who won four out of five, losing only to Virginia, 6-0.

His line is heavier than at any time since he took over. His backs, led by Sprinter Sterling Wingo, are fast and can pass. His weaknesses are at ends where he has only one experienced player, Ron Casto, and perhaps in reserves, most of whom are sophs and need seasoning.

The Gobblers may be good enough to beat Richmond, the only team they've conquered since 1947, and V.M.I. and Washington and Lee. Only Maryland and Duke probably run up huge scores on them. They'll give George Washington, North Carolina State

Caution Ousts Overconfidence As Keynote of Redskins

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Apparently, there've been some changes made in the Redskins' oratorical formation.

Coach Herman Ball has converted them from a boastful squad to a hopeful one, all in the space of four days.

Last Tuesday, the Redskins' speakers at the Advertising Club were full of unbridled confidence. One of them even said the team would win all of its league games.

There wasn't even a hint of that kind of talk yesterday as the Touchdown Club threw its annual preseason whingding at the Statler for the Redskins.

Instead of bravado, there was caution. Perhaps the league opener with the Colts in Baltimore tomorrow being only 72 hours away had something to do with the change.

Bill Dudley, who only Tuesday said the Redskins would be hard to stop, reversed his field completely. Yesterday he asked "lady luck not to desert us now, because now's when we really need you."

Sammy Baugh, still on the optimistic side, but not as much as a few days ago, keynoted the Redskins' newest approach to the situation by saying: "We can't afford to be boasting any longer, because we've got to back it up now."

Gen. Clifton Cates, commandant of the Marine Corps, chided the Redskins.

"You go out and win all of your games," he told them, "and I'll see if I can't arrange a game for you with the Quantico Marines."

General Cates was given a standing ovation. So was Sammy Baugh.

When a luncheon guest blurted out a reminder of the President Truman Marine "incident" of two weeks ago, General Cates took it good-naturedly, replying:

"Speaking as a Marine, let me say this: We Marines don't mind being insulted once in a while. It's when we're ignored that we get mad."

Cates told the Redskins he was sorry the Marines had to deprive them of Quarterback Eddie LeBaron, now at Quantico, and that he was also looking over the present Redskins' squad to find more candidates for the Marines' team.

This brought a rejoinder from George Marshall, Redskins president, who said:

"General Cates is like the rest of the generals; he's got so many men working for him, he doesn't know who he's got The Marines had a few of our players during the last war, and I'm here to tell you they aren't getting them again. Hell, they've already taken LeBaron from us. That's a helluva start.

"If General Cates can spare the time, I'm going to let him do our drafting for us at the next meeting. Any man who makes LeBaron his first choice is good enough for me."

Football Contest Starts Tuesday

The fourth annual Football Contest conducted by The Washington Post will begin Tuesday, September 19, on games scheduled for September 23.

The contest each week will include 20 major college games. The contestant will select the winner (or tie) of each of these games. There will also be a twenty-first game for which the contestant must give the "Probable Score," to be considered by the contest judges only in case two or more persons tie on the first 20 games.

The contest winner each week will receive two tickets to the "Game of The Week," selected by The Washington Post, as well as first-class round-trip transportation for two persons.

The Notre Dame-North Carolina game in South Bend, Ind., September 30 has been selected as the first "Game of The Week."

List of games for the opening week will first appear in editions of Tuesday, September 19.

Wiffy Cox Shares 2 Firsts

Congressional Country Club Pro Wiffy Cox tied for first place in two events yesterday in the Middle Atlantic Golf Association's Pro-Senior Tournament at Indian Spring.

Wiffy tied Kenwood Pro George Diffenbaugh at 73, for first in the pro sweepstakes, and then teamed up with Elmer Jenkins, also of Congressional, to put together a best-ball 68 to earn a tie in the Pro-Senior.

PRO SWEEPSTAKES

Tie for first, Wiffy Cox (Congressional), 36, 37—73, and George Diffenbaugh (Kenwood), 36, 37—73; tie for third, Mel Shorey (Indian Spring), 36, 38—74, and Al Houghton (Prince Georges), 36, 38—74; fifth, Ward Burgess (Chevy Chase), 36, 40—78.

SENIOR SWEEPSTAKES

First low net, L. G. Pray (Columbia), 80—16—73; second low net, Elliott Spicer (Indian Spring), 80—6—74; low gross, Alan Mills (Congressional), 78; third low net, Frank Butler (Indian Spring), 88—12—76; second low gross, Maj. John McClure (Burning Tree), 79.

Bums Protest 6-2 Defeat

Boggess called him safe a second time.

When the Dodgers stormed in protest Boggess consulted with senior Umpire Babe Pinelli. Then he signalled Glaviano was out.

This brought Cardinal Manager Eddie Dyer out of the dugout for a new heated argument. When Dyer insisted the rules call for the catcher to tag the runner under such conditions, Boggess returned to his original decision and said the run counted.

Dr. Kenrick Eliminates Ralph, 1 Up

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Five-time District amateur golf champion Bobby Brownell of Chevy Chase continued his march toward his sixth title yesterday, mowing down third and fourth-round opponents to enter the finals of the D. C. Golf Association's tournament at Congressional Country Club.

He will meet Woodmont's Bud Brylawski in the finals today.

In a stunning quarter-finals upset, Dr. J. P. Kenrick of Kenwood, eliminated Ralph Bogart of Chevy Chase, one up. Bogart was a finalist last year and was regarded as the golfer most likely to beat Brownell.

Brownell defeated Prince Georges' Bob Chandler by a whopping 7-and-6 score in the morning round. Brownell was 3-under-par when the match was closed out at the end of 12 holes. In the afternoon he eliminated long-hitting Mike Jankowski, Kenwood Invitational champion from Prince Georges, 3 and 1.

Brylawski entered the finals with a 4-and-3 victory over Dr. Kenrick in the semifinals after a conquest of Congressional's Charley Given by the same score in the third round.

Brylawski will be the longest of long shots in today's 36-hole final. He has never before survived the qualifying round of a major local tournament.

Today's round starts at 9 o'clock.

Results of yesterday's quarter-final play:

Bobby Brownell (Chevy Chase) defeated Bob Chandler (Prince Georges), 7 and 6; Mike Jankowski (Prince Georges) defeated B. C. Hartig (Prince Georges), 5 and 4; Dr. J. P. Kenrick (Kenwood) defeated Ralph Bogart (Chevy Chase), 1 up; Bud Brylawski (Woodmont) defeated C. P. Given (Congressional), 4 and 3.

Klippstein Beats Giants

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Johnny Klippstein pitched and batted the Chicago Cubs to a ten-inning 4-3 victory over the New York Giants today.

He helped with the game by opening up the tenth with a double. A sacrifice pushed him to third and a single by Hal Jeffcoat sent him home with the run that broke a 3-3 tie.

Wilson Raps Fairfax, 26-7

Bob Quinn Passes for 3 Scores

With Fullback Bob Quinn taking part in every touchdown play, Wilson defeated Fairfax, 26-7, in the opener for both teams yesterday at Wilson.

Bob passed for three touchdowns on throws of 2, 6 and 18 yards, and scored the fourth himself on a 6-yard run.

Quinn's first two scoring aerials were in the first quarter to Wayne August and Chris King. His other touchdown throw was in the second period, an 18-yarder to End Don Scott. Dick Sebastian's placement after the second score gave Wilson a 19-0 halftime lead.

The Green Tigers ended their scoring for the day when Quinn, back to pass, decided to run and scored from 6 yards out. Sebastian's kick was good again.

Unbeaten Heurich Wins 2 More In All-America Play, 5-1, 8-0

Washington's Heurich Brewers, defending champions, chalked up two more victories yesterday in the All-American Amateur Baseball Association tournament.

They defeated Maryland State, 5-1, in the morning and Springfield, 8-0, in a night game. The Brewers are undefeated after three games in the double-elimination tournament.

Jerry Zanelotti, Jack Castro and Buddy Kaufman each collected two hits apiece for the Brewers in the morning game. One of Castro's hits was a home run. He also batted in three runs.

Jack Chatterton pitched The Washington Post-Industrial League team to its night win with a 4-hitter.

Another Washington team, the Police Department, was ousted, 9-1, by Pittsburgh. It was the Policemen's second loss.

Mount Vernon Beats Gonzaga

Mount Vernon High chalked up its first victory in its four-year series with Gonzaga, 14-6, before a capacity crowd of 5000 last night at Mount Vernon Stadium.

Eddie West, whose passing accounted for both the victors' touchdowns, threw to Jimmy Darr for 41 yards and a score in the second quarter.

West passed to Paul Norfolk on a 29-yard scoring play in the third period. Jasper Lakey kicked both extra points from placement.

Bernie Lauck scored for Gonzaga on a five-yard run off tackle in the final quarter.

Bailey, Egenroad Reach Finals of Women's Tourney

Mrs. George Bailey defeated Mrs. Owen Hines, 1 up, and Mrs. Charles Egenroad, medalist, won from Mrs. Henry Riley, 2 and 1, yesterday to reach the finals of the women's championship at the Washington Golf and Country Club. They will play the finals Monday.

In the consolation flight, Mrs. George Calvert defeated Mrs. Howard Lady, 1 up, and Mrs. Frank Mirth defeated Mrs. Hales Dinneen, 5 and 4.

The Bailey-Hines match developed the day's most exciting finish. Mrs. Bailey, 2 up, lost the seventeenth. She drove into a ditch on the eighteenth and took a penalty stroke. But Mrs. Hines dubbed two shots and Mrs. Bailey sank an 8-foot putt for the victory.

Tigers Beat Out Yankees, 9-7

third inning and when Allie Reynolds blew a mental gasket in the sixth.

Coleman made a gift of a run to the Tigers in the third when after retrieving a single to centerfield by Aaron Robinson, he stood examining it for no reason while Johnny Groth scored all the way from first base.

In the fifth inning, with Vic Wertz trapped between third and home and none out, Reynolds for some unaccountable reason made a play at first base on Groth's rap back to the box, permitting Wertz to score.

Mize got into the act first with the Yankees leading, 1-0, after scoring a run on a single by Rizzuto and a long double to left center by Joe DiMaggio. He promptly ballooned the Yankees' lead to 3-0 by walloping a long homer against the facing of the third deck in right field.

Gerry Priddy, another old Yankee himself, got the Tigers almost even in their first inning after Kolloway drew a walk from the erratic Tommy Byrne. He whaled a 2-and-1 pitch into the left field seats for a homer. Only a sensational running catch by Mapes in right field on Groth's long drive kept the Tigers from tying the score.

The Yankees messed it up badly in the third inning and the Tigers went in front, 5-3. Reynolds had taken over an inning earlier after Byrne had pitched himself out of the game. Wertz drew a walk and with one out, Groth singled through the box. On Kolloway's smash, Bill Johnson fumbled and Wertz scored the run that made it 3-3.

But the Tigers weren't through. Aaron Robinson hit for Bob Swift and singled to center to get Groth home from second. The hit was slowed up by Coleman's glove and the Yankee second baseman raced into center to retrieve it. Apparently satisfied with that exertion, he held the ball while Groth sneaked home from third. Eventually, Coleman threw it in, but umpire Charley Berry said Groth was safe on a close play.

The amazing Mize chipped a run off that 5-3 lead of the Tigers with his second homer that led off the fourth, his longest, which reached full into the third deck in right field. And in the fifth, he came up again.

Houtteman was still pitching at that point and Mapes clipped him for a single. Rizzuto sacrificed and Berra grounded out, but with two out DiMag walked, and now it was up to Mize. Result: his third homer of the day—a clout into the lower deck in right center and the Yanks had the 7-5 lead they couldn't hold.

In their own fifth, the Tigers came up with a gift run off Reynolds. Wertz walked and Evers doubled to left center to put him on third with one out. When Groth bounced a ball to Reynolds, Wertz was badly trapped between third and the plate. But Reynolds suddenly settled for a play on Groth at first and conceded the Tigers Wertz's run.

The Tigers got no more out of that inning, but in the sixth they wiped out the last vestige of the Yankees' 7-6 lead and drove Reynolds from the box.

Johnny Lipon started it with a single to left and with one out George Kell singled to center. Vic Wertz then struck the big blow—a double to left that got Lipon home with the tying run and moved Kell to third with one out.

Tom Ferrick was called in by the Yankees and his first act was to walk Evers deliberately. Groth whacked a long fly to center that got Kell home from third with the run that made it 8-7, Tigers, and then Don Kolloway singled to center for an insurance tally.

Borowy took them home from there.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

The creation of several new Federal agencies to speed up the defense program are in the mill.

The next agency slated to be set up, insiders say, will be one similar to the World War II Board of Economic Warfare. The proposed new agency would be charged with helping our friends abroad economically, while doing all it can to disrupt the economy of our enemies.

It's possible that the Economic Cooperation Administration, Military Assistance Program, the stockpiling program and other such activities would be made a part of the proposed new agency.

LETTER: "I believed it when I was told the Army, Navy and Air Force had been 'unified.' Then I went to the Pentagon to offer my services to my Government in this critical period. In the next five hours I was shunted from one personnel office to another, six in all, and I left in disgust when I was told at the sixth office that I should have gone to still another office. Now I know why the Pentagon is so large—to house many different personnel offices to bewilder persons like myself."

PEOPLE: Nathaniel Knowles will head up the statistical division in Commerce's new National Production Authority. He's ECA's director o fstatistics and reports . . . Scott Hershey has transferred from ECA to the press office of the National Security Resources Board . . . At ECA, Enos Curtin has been named acting assistant commissioner for operations, and Charles E. Stott will succeed C. H. Burgess as director of the strategic materials division . . . Frederick W. Weber is the winner of NFFE's merit award of 1950. He's a Civil Service Commission employe in Los Angeles.

FBI: Its new 6-million-dollar defense appropriation will provide the Federal Bureau of Investigation with funds to hire 2053 additional employes.

Director J. Edgar Hoover informed Congress that 773 new employes will be hired here, mainly in its identification division and files section. The field staff will be boosted by 1280 employes, 800 agents and 480 clerks. The starting salary for an agent is $5000 and he must be an expert accountant or a graduate lawyer. However, Hoover conceded the salary is pretty low to try to get men with those qualifications." He said qualifications may have to be lowered.

CAPITOL HILL: The Senate has passed a bill to permit postal custodial employes who were transferred to General Services to retain the postal salary system and other benefits. But there's a good chance the bill would be vetoed if it gets to the President . . . House-Senate conferees are still at odds over what rights should be given Federal workers to appeal their efficiency ratings. It's posible that the controversy will result in killing the entire bill to overhaul the rating system.

UNION NEWS: That was a merited tribute the President paid to the National Federation of Federal Employes. The NFFE, Mr. Truman said, "has devoted itself consistently to the development of a democratic career service, based upon a foundation of freedom, opportunity and security." . . . How's this for strength? The National Rural Letter Carriers Association has 100 percent membership in 35 States. . . . The National Association of Deputy United States Marshals has been assured that the House will block the Senate-approved bill that would exempt their jobs from the Civil Service system.

RETIREMENT: Hundreds of Federal employes who had WPA, CWA, and FERA service haven't been given credit toward retirement for it. Civil Service has worked out a formula on how it can be done. This is it:

"If evidence indicates that the rate of salary received was $100 per month or more, appropriate steps of verification will be taken. If official records show that the employe was at one time paid from administrative funds, it will be presumed conclusively that he had received a regular appointment in a Federal establishment and that all subsequent continuous service in the same State at $100 or more per month which can be verified is creditable for retirement purposes, regardless of the source of the funds from which he was thereafter paid."

Credit Firm Gets $200 Fine And Scolding

Judge Kronheim Tells Columbia Company It Lacks Conscience

Columbia Credit Co. was convicted and blistered in Municipal Court yesterday for charging more than 6 percent on secured loans without a license for such rates.

Judge Milton S. Kronheim, jr., told president S. Dewey Gottlieb that his corporation "has no conscience," as he levied the maximum fine of $200.

Judge Kronheim also said that the maximum fine in such cases constituted "a blot on the community."

"As a matter of business policy, this corporation seized on the desire to purchase automobiles," Judge Kronheim continued, "and took advantage of the patent gullibility and weakness of two purchasers, and greatly overcharged them."

Transactions Last Spring

The company was convicted in connection with transactions last spring involving Peter Bunn, 1120 25th st. nw., and Joshua Reed, 2107 I st. ne.

Bunn testified he borrowed $150 and had to pay back $250 in 10 monthly installments.

Reed testified he borrowed $198.28 and had to pay back $300 in 10 monthly installments.

Bernard Margolius, attorney for the credit company, 2221 14th st. nw., argued that insurance policies costing more than $90 were issued with each loan.

Prosecutor Clark King said the policies were issued "as an effort to deceive," as much as six months after they were alleged to have gone into effect.

One of the borrowers testified that he was specifically told that he had no insurance when he borrowed the money, King said.

The other borrower testified he received his policy "only a few days ago," King said.

Policies Rubber-Stamped

The insurance policies were rubber-stamped with the signature of an agent who was actually sick in a Philadelphia hospital, King charged. And the man was not a licensed agent of the company for which he was selling insurance, King argued.

"We are defendants in a criminal case," Margolius told Judge Kronheim, "and we don't have to explain anything. We are presumed to be innocent."

Says He'll Appeal

"One or two transactions, even if established, do not prove a course of business," he added.

Margolius said he would appeal the decision.

In August, Judge Kronheim dismissed a similar suit against the company, because, he said, the complaint did not show how much of the amount to be repaid was insurance and how much was interest.

The automobile loan agency in July lost a fight to enjoin the District Insurance Superintendent from refusing to renew its insurance license for the current year.

Superintendent Albert Jordan denied renewal when the license expired in April.

Mrs. Harvey, 35 Years With YMCA, Retires

"I think I'm going to miss all this," she said, tapping her mimeograph-blue fingers on the desk.

All this was almost all noise.

The noise of boys at play. Billiard balls clicking, chairs scraping on the floor, and young lads horsing around. Boys eight to 17 years old, in the "rec" room of the Boys YMCA.

The lady with blued fingers was Mrs. Marguerite C. Harvey, of 447 Lebaum st., se., secretary-stenographer of the Boys Y, at 1732 G st. nw.

Leaving for Tennessee

Next week, she said, she is leaving Washington with her husband for the quiet of Kingston, a small Tennessee town near Oak Ridge.

"We'll have about two acres, and maybe I'll be able to do some weaving, and pottery making. They're my hobbies." She added, "I taught lots of my boys clay-modelling."

"My boys" to her meant the thousands of Washington area lads she'd enrolled in the "Y," kept records of, sent off to summer camp, and welcomed back. Some she saw go off to war.

"Four of them left, at first," she said. "I used to write them carbon letters, but then more and more left, and I had to get working on the mimeograph machine."

Hundreds Tell Thanks

Some of her boys were back last night for the surprise party staged for her. It was easy to surprise her. After all, it was the regular Fall Opening Night Program at the Boys "Y." She couldn't miss that as long as she was still in town.

Her going-away present was a loose-leaf book of autograph messages from the boys she helped steer through adolescence. Hundreds of pages of special notes of thanks.

They also gave her a collective check, from contributions close to $350. And they gave her one last good dose of what she confesses she'll be missing—noise.

Mrs. Harvey began her "Y" work in 1907 with a three-year stretch in the stenographic pool of the Religious, Physical and Boys Department. In January, 1918, she returned to the "Y" to serve as secretary to the religious work director, serving the military camps of the area.

She took one year off, 1920, to give her own two boys and a girl better care. Since 1928, she served continuously as secretary for the Boys Branch.

She retired, she said, to make her new home in Tennessee, where the climate is more favorable for her husband, John W. Harvey. A victim of spinal arthritis, he was forced to retire and seek relief in a better climate than Washington's, she said.

Twenty Pairs of Cubes, All Even-Numbered, Found on Fireman

A Metropolitan Fire Department private was stabbed to death last night and police said they found 20 pairs of crooked dice in his pockets, all the dice numbered so it was impossible to throw a seven.

Police Lieut. Wayland W. Whittemore of the Fifth Precinct said the dead man was Clarence Toye, 25, of 1527 B st. se. Toye, a fireman at No. 10 Truck Co. since he was appointed a month ago, was seen staggering at 14th and A sts. se., by a motorist, Bernard Hawkins, 32, of 924 1st st. nw.

Police said Hawkins took Toye to Gallinger Hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival at 7:40 p. m. by Dr. Robert Corrente. Police were summoned and Lieutenant Whittemore said they found 40 dice in Toye's pockets, all of them bearing even numbers on all six sides.

Whittemore said preliminary investigation showed Toye had been shooting craps with 15 or 20 men in an alley in the 1500 block of East Capitol st. se. With the dice found in Toye's pocket, it would have been impossible to roll any odd numbers, including the "seven" which loses for the roller after the first throw.

Police last night were looking for Toye's dice-shooting companions.

Jewel Robbery Case Is Continued To September 22

A charge of breaking into and entering an Arlington woman's house and taking jewelry police say is worth $5000 was continued until September 22 yesterday in Arlington County Court against Joseph DeMarco, 30, of New York City.

Judge Harry Thomas advanced the preliminary hearing date when he learned DeMarco, an electrician, had no attorney. The jewelry was taken September 7 from the home of Mrs. Juanita Cassidy, 50, of 3137 Key blvd., Arlington.

She told police she had met DeMarco on a train trip prior to the robbery, that he identified himself as an insurance company investigator and gave his age as 40. Mrs. Cassidy herself told police she valued the jewelry at about $500.

Land Buying For Parkway Nearly Done

Montgomery Plans $180,000 In Bonds To Match U. S. Sum For Memorial Road

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission hopes to complete land-buying soon for the George Washington Memorial Parkway in Montgomery County.

NCPPC has been notified by county authorities that they plan to issue bonds to finance a $180,000 land item for the parkway, which will be matched by a similar sum from the NCPPC.

John Nolen, jr., NCPPC planning director, said yesterday acquisition of land for the parkway is about 75 percent complete.

The parkway will open up both the lower and upper sections of Montgomery County and will connect with the proposed through route to Cumberland, Md.

At yesterday's session, NCPPC was asked by Public Buildings Administrator W. E. Reynolds to cooperate in any future planning for the dispersal of key Federal buildings in Washington.

Nolen said specific locations where Federal buildings might be dispersed were not discussed.

The planning director was named liaison officer for the NCPPC in efforts by the Civil Aeronautics Administration to find a site for another airport here. The CAA presented its "basic studies" on the proposed port to the commission yesterday.

Nolen said he thought it would be "some time" before a site for the airport is selected. He said the NCPPC will consult with other Government groups on highway locations and zoning problems to be created by the new airport.

The commission also approved the "paper" closings of some streets on the National Arboretum grounds. Although none of the affected streets has been built, the ground has been reserved for them, Nolen said. Wiped off the map are sections of 28th and R sts. and Maryland ave. that lie within the grounds.

The commission also approved the plan to extend North Capitol st. through the Soldiers Home grounds. The plan was approved by the District Commissioners Thursday.

Pageant Opens Sports Portion Of Regatta

Nor-Wer II, with Norman A. Quasebarth aboard, was selected the "best decorated boat" at the marine pageant last night off the Hains Point seawall. The pageant opened the three-day aquatic sports portion of the President's Cup Regatta.

Carl Herrmann on March Iral won second place in the best decorated boat classification and Jim Hannan on the Barbett was third.

Other winners in the 55-boat parade were:

Historical theme: Edward C. Baltz on the 50-50, first; Colonel C. C. Jardin on the El Coed, second; Sea Scout Troop No. 55 on The Lexington, third.

Most originally decorated boat: Sea Scout Ship No. 75, The Pride, first; Eugene Duffer on the Tamara, second; Austin H. Forkner on Aloha, third.

Taxpayers Reminded Of 2 D. C. Deadlines

District Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson yesterday reminded city residents of two tax deadlines coming in the next month:

(1) First half payments on 1951 real estate and personal property taxes must be made at the collector's office or be in the mails before midnight September 30.

(2) Second half payments on District income taxes (on income received in calendar 1949) must be paid by October 15.

In either case persons failing to pay before the deadline may be penalized 1 percent of the tax due for each month it remains unpaid, Pearson said.

Silver Fox Returned to Girl Owner After Quick Snack

By Bob Burchette-The Washington Post

Priscilla's pet silver fox, "George," is back home again

Full of hamburger and milk, a little silver fox was back last night where he belonged, at the home of his owner, Priscilla Philleo, 10, of 4329 F st. se.

"George," the fox, took off Thursday night for parts unknown. Priscilla wasn't too worried because "George" had done it once before in the month he's been her pet.

His whereabouts remained unknown until yesterday afternoon when Joseph Y. Yuen, 41, of 515 Hilltop ter. se., was having a neighborly chat with Mrs. Mary Lader of 509 Hilltop ter.

Mrs. Lader spied something move under a bush in the front yard.

Yuen took a look.

"That's no cat," he said. "That's a fox."

"George" minded his manners as Yuen reached under the bush, pulled him out by the chain on his neck and fastened the chain to the picket fence in front of his house. As a reward for his manners, "George" got hamburger and roll and milk. He polished off the hamburger and milk but scorned the roll.

The capture of the silver fox soon was the talk of the neighborhood and it reached the ears of Priscilla's father, Richard. He took "George" home.

Late yesterday afternoon, "George" was dozing in the Philleo kitchen and Priscilla was out playing with her friends.

Man Crippled 7 Months Ago Found Hanged

Unemployed, He Spurned Hospital Care on Wednesday

They sent an ambulance to take Floyd H. Walker to the hospital but he said he wasn't ready to go.

In a hospital he could get food and medical care. The 55-year-old man who lived alone hadn't really had enough of either since he injured his hip in February, making him a virtual prisoner in his room at 1802 Wyoming ave. nw.

His neighbors were kindly and when they knew he was hungry, they took him food. Mrs. A. L. Welch, his landlady, of 1804 Wyoming ave. nw., and Mrs. Jimmie Vincent, who lives at 1802 Wyoming ave., both had taken food to the crippled man. Mrs. Welch said Walker got a monthly relief check of $39.

He could walk only with difficulty. (Mrs. Vincent said the Salvation Army had given him the cane he used to hobble about his room). He hadn't left the room since February. On Wednesday, a doctor said Walker should be in a hospital.

An ambulance was sent but he told the attendants that he didn't want to go. Mrs. Vincent said he said: "I'm not ready to go tonight."

At 11 a. m. yesterday, Mrs. Welch went to the third floor to get some trash. Walker's body was hanging by a clothesline from a door frame.

He had scrawled a note in pencil an a rough pad. It started: "Dear Ones" and police said it told of how he couldn't go on living any longer.

Francis J. Hailey, Health Department doctor, pronounced him dead and Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of death by suicide.

Hanging of Prisoner In Cell Ruled Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald in the death Wednesday of Ross Morrill Lees.

Lees, 37, a dishwasher at the Congressional Country Club, was found hanged in his cell at the Thirteenth Precinct Station. He had been arrested for drunkenness.

'Round and 'Round

'Jack-Jill' Chase Ends In the Gaol

Jack and Jill led police a merry chase last night and police won.

The chase, up and down one block after another, started a little after 10 p. m. when two scout car men from the Eleventh Precinct saw a Jack and Jill ice cream truck bowling along at a sharp clip at 5th st. and Nichols ave. se.

Pvts. Harry Barbour and Tadeus Juszczyc reasoned that the regular driver would hardly be discouraging business by zipping along the streets. Their suspicions were more than heightened when they saw the front seat had more than its usual quota of one—four more, in fact.

They promptly gave chase and the truck as promptly sped away. For eight blocks in and around the same neighborhood, the scout car chased Jack and Jill as the radio dispatcher summoned help. But in the 200 block of Xenia st., the ice cream wagon cut into an alley; the scout car followed and squeezed alongside. The truck nudged a tree on the side of the street, bringing the proceedings to an end.

Police said all five aboard were juveniles between 15 and 17 years of age. All were charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, including the driver, who also collected several other counts—failure to slow down, driving wrong way on one way street, etc.

Police reported that, with the exception of two ice cream sticks, the cargo was intact. The passengers were too busy to bother with ice cream.

Fairfax Girl Seriously Injured by Automobile

An 8-year-old Fairfax girl was seriously injured yesterday when she was struck by an automobile on Route 620 near her home.

The child, Ellen L. Boller, of Route 3, was admitted to Arlington Hospital for treatment of head injuries and was reported in fair condition by hospital authorities last night. Police said she was struck by an automobile driven by Beverley Joyce Ammon, 16, of Springfield, Va.

According to police, Miss Ammon told them the child ran into the path of her automobile. No charges have been placed.

Eastern High Stadium Bill Is Sent to White House

$50,000 Authorized For Construction and Lights; Stone House Measure Approved

Three District bills were sent to the White House yesterday for signing into law.

The measures would:

1. Authorize $50,000 to complete the Eastern High School Stadium and install lighting for night games.

2. Permit the Government to purchase the Old Stone House at 3051 M st. nw. The Georgetown landmark was reportedly slated for demolition to clear a site for commercial use. Georgetown residents had urged the legislation to save the historic house, which was built in about 1767.

3. Grant tax exemption to the YMCA here.

The measure went to the White House after the Senate and House agreed to minor amendments.

With Congress rushing to recess, it appeared likely several previously-blocked bills would die. If a special session is called after the November elections there still would be a chance for action this year.

Among those awaiting final congressional action are measures to: Increase unemployment compensation here, apply the minimum wage law to men, create a commission on human rights for the elimination of racial discrimination in employment, amend the barbers' and optometrists' regulations, and the perennial bill to authorize the District Commissioners to kill starlings.

CTC to Start Express Buses For Shoppers

Experiment to Serve Livingston Manor And Chevy Chase

Capital Transit Co. will start an experiment on two bus routes September 25 with a "shoppers' special"—off-hour express buses on lines now used only during rush hours.

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday approved the plan, which will consist of adding three express buses at the end of the morning rush hour and three just before the start of the evening rush to the two lines.

Capital Transit Vice President E. C. Giddings said it was hoped the express service would relieve downtown parking problems by causing shoppers to travel by bus. The idea will be tried out first with the A-9 line running between Livingston Manor in southeast Washington and the Archives, and the L-7 (a.m.) and L-3 (p.m.) line running between Chevy Chase Circle and the Federal Triangle.

At present the last morning A-9 bus leaves Livingston Manor at 8:32 a. m. The PUC authorized adding three more runs leaving at 9:03, 9:33 and 10:03 a. m. New buses will leave downtown for Livingston at 3:22, 3:50 and 4:20 p. m.

On the L-7 line the first new bus will leave Chevy Chase Circle at 8:58 a. m. The other two will follow at half-hour intervals. In the afternoon the new L-3 buses will leave downtown at 3:20, 3:50 and 4:20 p. m.

Fish Fry Argument Results in Stabbing

At a fish fry, someone has to fry the fish. But Angelo Trice, 33, and Ed Gray, 45, both of 45 Ivy st. se., couldn't agree who would do it.

Their disagreement led to words and, according to police, a stabbing resulted in which Trice was critically injured and Gray was charged with assault with a deadly weapon.

Baker added that when he arrived, Gray said of Trice: "I wouldn't hurt him for anything in the world."

Lyre and Hide Away Clubs Being Investigated, Fay Says

Two more after-hours clubs here are being investigated for possible violation of their corporate charters, United States Attorney George Morris Fay said yesterday.

They are the Lyre Club, 919 12th st. nw. and the Hide Away Club, 3135 K st nw. Representatives of both appeared Tuesday before the House sub-committee investigating Washington crime.

Fay has moved against every other club on which the subcommittee has turned the spotlight. Using evidence obtained by the committee, Fay has prosecuted the clubs for charter violation and shut down all but one.

The clubs were started for benevolent and charitable purposes, according to their charters.

All Defendants Are Assured Of Counsel by Judge Neilson

From now on, lawyers will be appointed automatically for defendants in the courtroom of Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson.

Defendants are habitually asked if they desire to be represented by counsel, but often waive this right.

Judge Neilson said that this right to counsel was often waived as a result of misunderstanding.

"The defendant frequently has a confused mind arising from the gravity of his own plight and from a lack of knowledge of the complex judicial procedures confronting him," the judge said in a memorandum.

"In cases where the defendant does not have the advantage of counsel and presents his own case, he may not be aware of the defenses available to him," he said.

Cases may be prejudiced, he said, because the job of the court in determining guilt or innocence is more difficult without counsel.

Appellate courts are put "in the difficult position" of determining whether the defendant knew what he was doing when he waived the right to be represented by counsel.

Judge Neilson is currently sitting in the United States branch of Municipal Court where serious misdemeanors are tried, and where accused felons are arraigned.

House Passes Deposit Limit Boost for FDIC

By S. Oliver Goodman

Legislation permitting the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation tot insure individual bank deposits up to $10,000 was finally approved yesterday by the House and sent to President Truman. Quick signature in the White House is anticipated.

The present insured limit on bank deposits is $5000.

When the $10,000 limit bill is made law for the banks, a similar boost in insured accounts of savings and loan associations will automatically go into effect.

The House Banking Committee told the House before it acted on the measure boosting the size of insurance:

"The results bespeak the outstanding record the corporation (FDIC) has achieved in bringing to depositors sound, effective and uninterrupted operation of the banking system with resulting safety and liquidity of bank deposits . . . There has been no failure of an insured bank since 1944."

There are more than 104 million depositors in insured banks and the committee estimated that 95.7 percent of the accounts are fully protected by deposit insurance.

Savings in loan associations are insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, also a Government agency.

Guatemalan Embassy Scene of Gay Fiesta On Independence Day

By Marie McNair

OF THE FIVE Central American Republics celebrating the same Independence Day, the big party of the day yesterday was at the Guatemalan Embassy. It was also the first large official fete the Ambassador and Senora de Goubaud-Carrera have given since they arrived in Washington in January.

Yesterday was the 129th anniversary of independence for Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras and Nicaragua. But as the El Salvador and Honduran Ambassadors are away, there were no celebrations at their embassies. Informal fiestas held at the embassies of Costa Rica and Niacargua were for their compatriots only.

And at the Mexican Embassy, there was dancing and singing for the Mexican colony in the Capital at an evening party given by the Ambassador and Senora de la Colina celebrating 140 years of freedom. At 11 p. m. the Ambassador repeated the famous "Cry of Arms" which started his country on its way to independence, and a buffet supper followed.

The blue and white flag of Guatemala flew over the embassy all day yesterday. At the late afternoon fete diplomats and dignitaries saluted Guatemala over tinkling glasses and lingered around the buffet where there were black beans and fluffy rice; cold hams and mousses, and a half watermelon filled to the brim with fresh fruit salad.

SENORA DE GOUBAUD-CARRERA, who is American-born, wore a long white frock sparkling with silver bugles on the bodice. In native Guatemalan costume, Senora de Diaz-Gomez, wife of the First Secretary of the embassy, was an eye-catcher, her bouffant skirt of many colors covered with a striped mantle of soft handwoven wool; heavy silver bracelets and earrings making music as she walked.

It being a weekend and the U. N. General Assembly about to open in New York, many of the Chiefs of Mission had already left town. However, I saw the Egyptian Ambassador, Mohamed Kamil Bey Abdul Rahim, without Mme. Abdul Rahim, and the Colombian Ambassador, Dr. Eduardo Zuleta-Angel. The Paraguay Ambassador and Senora de Boettner were there and others were the Minister of Hashemite Jordan and Mme. Haikal, the counselor of the Norwegian Embassy and Mme. Mangor; Col. Colon Eloy Alfaro, former Ecuador Ambassador, and Miss Eliana Braun and Robert D. Stiller, with him; Senator and Mrs. Dennis Chavez chatting with the David Fernslers, and I met handsome Tomas de Anchorena, counselor of the Argentine Embassy, representing his Ambassador, who is out of town.

Said "hello" to Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris; and Mrs. Norman Littell, who wore black, studded with gold nailheads; glimpsed Walter Wilds, and his pretty "Bonnie" across the buffet table; and stopped for a few words with Judge and Mrs. Clarence Goodwin, Col. Robert Guggenheim and Tom and Jean Krock.

GALA OPENING:

The Pall Mall room of the Raleigh Hotel opened for the season last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Curt Schiffeler entertained at their table the Turkish Ambassador, Feridun Erkin; the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn and his daughters, Miss Margaret Glenn and Miss Titia Glenn; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Count and Countess von Liettichau, Miss Ann Cates and Lieut. Floyd Hudson; Miss Sophie Meyer and Milarad Choumenkowitch, and Miss Jane Lingo and Lieut. Fred Archibald.

Others dining and dancing were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Robinson, Miss Patricia Prochnik, M. and Mme. Camille Chautemps, and the latter's father, Andre Durand, of Paris; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Freer, Miss Claire Snow, Barry Freer and the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Mme. Echegaray.

ENTERTAINING TONIGHT:

Lieut. Col. G. P. Marriott of the Canadian Joint Staff, and Mrs. Marriott, will entertain at a farewell dinner this evening at their home in Bethesda in honor of J. R. Murray, Second Secretary of the Canadian Embassy, and Mrs. Murray. Mr. Murray has been appointed to the Economics Division of the Department of External Affairs and with Mrs. Murray will leave for Ottawa soon.

On Wednesday the Murrays will be entertained at a cocktail party by the Second Secretary of the Canadian Embassy and Mrs. Robert W. A. Dunn.

AMBASSADOR JERONIMO REMORINO of the Argentine will introduce members of his family to the embassy staff at a party to be held at the embassy today from 6 to 7 o'clock. Dr. and Senora de Oliva Velez, the Ambassador's brother-in-law and sister, are visiting here a month, and Dr. Aldo Remorino, his brother will be at the embassy for two weeks.

ARRIVALS AND DEPARTURES:

Thomas A. Stone, Canadian Minister to Sweden, and former Canadian Minister in Washington, has arrived with Mrs. Stone and their young daughter, Ellen, to spend the weekend at Wardman Park Hotel. They will leave Monday night for a visit to their home near Charleston, S. C. Mr. Stone took up his duties in Stockholm in February, 1949.

BAR LEADERS MEET—Miss Frieda Hennock (left), Federal Communications Commissioner, chats with Jo V. Morgan, president of the District of Columbia Bar Association, and Mrs. J. Helen Slough of Cleveland, Ohio, before her address at the luncheon meeting yesterday of the National Association of Women Lawyers at the Carlton Hotel. Miss Hennock, a lawyer herself, spoke on the "Free Airwaves: An Administration Dilemma." Mr. Morgan was an honor guest for the meeting and Mrs. Slough is NAWL president

Television Needs New Blood, Miss Hennock Tells Bar Group

By Norma Lanum

TELEVISION needs a transfusion, says Frieda Hennock, Federal Communications Commissioner.

"We must introduce some new blood," Miss Hennock said yesterday, in the form of more programs from our non-commercial educational institutions. Miss Hennock spoke at the luncheon meeting of the National Association of Women Lawyers at the Carlton Hotel. The NAWL opened its three-day convention in Washington yesterday morning.

Though the educational groups are not yet ready to embark on the TV field, a place for them in the medium must be reserved before it's too late, Miss Hennock told the women lawyers.

The FCC is now about to allocate "what is in all probability the last significant piece of spectrum in the ultra-high frequency band," she said. This means that all the available broadcasting space might soon be snatched up by commercial operators, closing the door to any possible broadcasting of the "higher type."

But if space is reserved for the schools it would help prevent TV from "assuming the characteristics of our aural broadcasting system," she continued, "and I for one think there is much room for improvement."

DR. JOHN STEELEMAN, Assistant to the President, outlined this country's future economic responsibilities during the convention banquet last evening at the Carlton.

"We must face restrictions and the loss of many things which we now enjoy," he stated, to meet our responsibilities throughout the world.

"The whole Nation is called upon to draw in its belt, to work harder, to save more, to pay more in taxes," he said.

First, we must step up our construction of basic productive facilities, to meet our defense quotas, but the "acceleration" will not prove harmful to our economy, he maintained.

Dr. Steelman pointed out that during World War II many persons thought the expanded production facilities would cause a peacetime depression. But in many cases, he continued, our past wartime expansion has porven insufficient to meet the needs of our peacetime economy.

The rate of growth of our "tremendously productive economy" is capable of stabilizing the new defense effort, he concluded.

OTHER LUNCHEON GUESTS of the women lawyers were Mrs. Olive Geiger Faircloth, special assistant to the Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia, Jo. V. Morgan, president of the District of Columbia Bar Association, Judge Burnita Matthews of the District Court and Judge Marion Harron of the United States Tax Court.

Miss Dorothea W. Blender, second vice president of the association, presided. Miss Irene Kennedy, cochairman of the convention committee, presided at the banquet.

Today's convention highlights include election of new National officers and a banquet address by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath.

Big Barbecue Will Benefit New Hospital

Women who will form the nucleus of a women's auxiliary to the new Anderson Orthopedic Hospital in Arlington are sponsoring an old-fashioned barbecue on the hospital grounds from 4 until 8 p. m. today. Funds from the barbecue will be used to furnish the hospital now nearing completion on Army-Navy dr. off Shirley hwy.

A hugh pit will be dug for the roasting of the meat, and entertainment has been planned in keeping with the old-fashioned theme. There will be exhibition square dancing, hill-billy music with singing troubadors milling through the crowd and "Uncle" Bud Ward as master of ceremonies, with his radio funsters.

Women who are serving on the committee in charge of the barbecue include Miss Henrietta Strobel of Alexandria, general chairman; Mrs. James H. Masterson of Alexandria, Mrs. Fred Everly of Fairfax and Mrs. Owen E. Williams of Arlington in charge of ticket sales; Mrs. Harold Polk, Mrs. O. Anderson Engh, Mrs. Lew Sutton, Miss Glenna Faye Brewer, all of Alexandria, Mrs. Allen M. Ferry, Mrs. Carl Mayer, Mrs. George W. Hervey, Mrs. Charles T. Booth, Mrs. Doyle Seldonright, Mrs. James R. Lee, all of Arlington, and Mrs. Dean Engh of Annandale, who are aiding with food and serving.

The men's committee in charge of the barbecueing consists of Bud Ward, Dean Engh, Dr. Raymond G. McGehee, Arthur Post, Carl Mayer, Fred Everly and Rocco Pomponio.

Barbara Ann and Bobby Polk, children of the Harold Polks of Alexandria and Annandale, are bringing along their two Shetland ponies and one Western cow-pony to provide rides for children among the guests.

Hear "Portia"

Phi Delts Open 3-Day Convention

One of the Nation's outstanding women lawyers—remembered fondly by her colleagues as "Prohibition Portia"—addressed delegates to the Phi Delta Delta legal fraternity's convention at a luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel.

She's Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney General of the United States from 1920 to '29—the first nine dry years—when she argued most of the early prohibition cases before the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Willebrandt, who now has an extensive law practice in Los Angeles, Calif., and Washington, spoke yesterday as a member of Phi Delta Delta. A former president and elder statesman of the group, she outlined the progress of women lawyers over the years.

Mrs. Willebrandt will remain in Washington for the meeting next week of the American Law Institute and the American Bar Association.

Highlight of the society's three-day meeting will include election of officers Sunday morning. Candidates are being selected by the nominating committee which was appointed in the opening sessions of the convention yesterday morning.

Miss Mary Burrus of Seattle, Wash., is chairman of the committee which also includes Miss Mary Hinds of Minneapolis, Minn., Miss Louisa Person of Washington, D. C., Miss Helen Dunlap of Kansas City, Mo., and Miss Jeannette Haarmann of New York, N. Y.

Also, a resolutions committee was chosen which will report Sunday morning. Mrs. Elizabeth C. Hardy, general chairman of the convention, and Mrs. Julia Benton Hopkins, director of 11 of the society, welcomed delegates to Washington.

Experiment Margaret

College Girl's Wardrobe Today Not Like Mother Used to Wear

By Ann Lawrence

(Last day of Margaret's beauty experiment)

FOR CLASSROOM WEAR Margaret likes to look neat in this three-piece outfit combining banker's gray flannel skirt and sleeveless jacket with chartreuse velveteen blouse

A MULTI-COLORED striped taffeta skirt is combined with a camisole of inky black velvet in this outfit Margaret chooses for parties and dates

WHEN Mother was a girl, this problem of going off to college (or finishing school) was a fairly simple matter. Her cosmetics were limited to soap and water, dusting powder and perhaps a bottle of cologne. The school catalogue was quite definite about the prescribed costume for campus wear. Her wardrobe needed to include only the school uniform, an afternoon calling frock, a Sunday outfit and one party gown.

Today, the college girl's wardrobe varies widely, depending upon whether she's attending a girl's school where campus dress is likely to be slacks or bluejeans, a coed university where casual clothes are worn for everything except The Dance of the Year, or a big-city university, etc.

It's impossible, of course, to set down specifics for each college. Here are some general facts that should help you know what the best-dressed girls wear on what campus.

You know that sweaters, skirts and blouses are safe and smart anywhere. Your own idea of what to do with a scarf and a belt and a hunk of rhinestone jewelry (yes, rhinestone this year in place of the classic pearl) stamps it individually YOU.

AT an all-girl school you'll find pants from Monday to Friday as often as skirts, unless, of course, the rules forbid. Ski pants, bluejeans, long shorts and even dungarees are accepted. Comes the weekend you'll want a soft suit, plus a party dress simple of line, rich of fabric, pared down to a minimum. But take along a cover-up jacket of some sort. The Toni Owen plaid outfit which Margaret wears on this page is ideal. As is, it might go to a fraternity house dance. With a long-sleeved blouse, it would go to a faculty tea. With a smoker's jacket of velveteen, in tangerine to pick up the pinthread of orange in the plaid, it's a dinner-in-town outfit.

If your school is located in a large city, then commuting to classes may be your problem. In this case, suits or jumpers, matching sweaters and skirts with an all-in-one look, are the thing. You'll want spectator shoes or low-heeled pumps. Scarfs are worn at your neck, not over you head. Your casual wool dress or suit takes you on a date, except for Saturday night when you'll want a short evening dress.

At a coed university, casual clothes of all types go right through the week and week-end, except for the most formal dances. But you'll stick to skirts and sweaters or blouses if there are men around to wear the trousers. Accessories change your outfit from a classroom dress to an informal Saturday date ensemble.

THESE are the fashion rules. The fads are fun as you make them up yourself. For campus or classroom, a three-piece outfit, designed by Toni Owen, gives the coed innumerable changes. Banker's gray flannel fashions the slim skirt and sleeveless jacket. Underneath, a chartreuse velveteen blouse with knitted sleeves which button in and out.

Whistle-bait, this plaid two-piecer, which Margaret models above. Skirt is reed-slim with an unexpected burst of knife pleats at one side for easy walking or sitting. Try the outfit as is for an informal dance. Wear it as a jumper, with a long-sleeved nylon blouse. Top it with a velveteen jacket when it's a cover-up occasion.

Separates run around the clock in the college girl's wardrobe and for formal occasions Margaret selected a multi-color striped taffeta skirt, topped by a camisole of midnight black velvet.

All Toni Owen designs.

In September Bridal Parade

The marriage of Miss Mary Elisabeth Puckett and Alba Burnham Martin of Washington, D. C., was celebrated in New York City on September 6. The bride has been a member of the educational staff of the National Gallery for several years, and the bridegroom is a trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board.

Daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Hugh W. Puckett, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Following a wedding breakfast, the newlyweds sailed on the Mauretania for a honeymoon in Europe. They will live in Washington. Mrs. Martin is a graduate of Barnard College and of Bryn Mawr Graduate School. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Martin of Geneva, Ohio, is a Harvard alumnus.

Eldridge—Maholick

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Maholick announce the marriage of their daughter, Marie Theresa, to John Doughty Eldridge, jr. on September 9 at St. Francis de Sales Church. The Rev. T. J. Nagle performed the ceremony, and a reception followed at the Watergate Inn. The couple will live in Washington, where the bridegroom, a recent graduate of Wilson Teachers' College, will attend George Washington University Graduate School.

Lachenbruch—Bennett

The marriage of Miss Edith Bennett of Baltimore, Md., to Arthur Herold Lachenbruch of Washington was celebrated in Baltimore on September 7. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Milton C. Lachenbruch. The newlyweds will live in Cambridge, Mass., while the bridegroom attends Harvard University Graduate School. He has just graduated, with honors, from Johns Hopkins University, and is a veteran of World War II.

Stuckey

MRS. E. PERRY ROBERTSON, JR., is the former Miss Betty Ann Niel, daughter of Mrs. Annie Niel of Arlington, Va. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Robertson, also of Arlington. Their wedding took place September 12 at the Mount Olivet Methodist Church in Arlington. The bridegroom's uncle, the Rev. Emmett Y. Robertson, performed the ceremony. The newlyweds will spend their honeymoon at Niagara Falls

Stuckey

MRS. ARTHUR CARCHEDI, whose marriage took place September 12 at the Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church, is the former Miss Erma Viola Brown. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carchedi, all of Washington. The newlyweds will be at home in Washton on return from their wedding trip to the Allegheny Mountains

White

MRS. HUGH LANIER SKINNER, JR., before her marriage, September 10 at Calvary Baptist Church, was Miss Blanche Margaret Hoffman. She is the daughter of Mrs. William A. Hoffman of Landover, Md. Mr. Skinner's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Lanier Skinner of Washington. The couple will live in Temple Hills, Md., following a Florida honeymoon

Southall

MRS. ALVAH DAVID ALLEN, the former Miss Vivas Marie Stubbings, will be at home in Washington on return from her wedding trip to Nagshead, N. C., and Williamsburg, Va. She was married September 9 at Holy Trinity Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Stubbings of Washington and Mr. Allen is the son of Mrs. Alvah K. Allen and the late Mr. Allen of Kansas City, Mo.

U. S. Employe Group Urges Loyalty Law

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15 (AP). The National Federation of Federal Employes today urged that the Federal loyalty program be enacted into basic law.

The program, which protects the Government from disloyal employes, now functions under an executive order of the President.

The resolution, adopted unanimously, stated:

"It is plain common sense demands that the Government of the United States should have protection against disloyal employes, and elemental justice demands that loyal employes should have protection against unwarranted and unsubstantiated charges."

In another resolution, the association said it will sponsor legislation—and seek support of veterans' groups for it—which will set up the following scale of retention points during a reduction in force:

Veterans with 30 percent service-connected disability, 10 retention points; veterans with less than 30 percent eight points; armed force service overseas, six points; armed force service inside U. S. for six months or more, four points; military service in the U. S. under six months, two points; civilian service, veteran or nonveteran, one point for each month.

Other resolutions passed by the convention urged:

Optional retirement of Federal employes after 30 years regardless of age.

Exemption of retirement annuities from income tax.

Payment of the true time and one-half for overtime work.

Payment of per diem allowances instead of subsistence for transferred employes.

Miller Assails Milk Group's Publicity Fund

Kirk Miller, former public relations man for the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, yesterday filed a brief with the Virginia Milk Commission opposing a price increase sought by the association and assailing its expenditures for publicity.

The association said it will sponsor legislation—and seek support of veterans' groups for it—which will set up the following scale of retention points during a reduction in force:

The commission took the request under advisement.

Miller said he asked and received permission to file a post-hearing brief because he was unable to attend the scheduled session.

In his brief, Miller charged that the association spent too much money for promotional work. He said he had been authorized by the association to spend $75,000 in promotion in a period of 15 months but that he felt such an expenditure was unnecessary. He spent only $40,000, Miller said. He said contracts were made by the association to spend additional money and "the consumers of milk paid for all this needless ballyhoo."

Sewage Bond Issue Is Sought In Arlington

The Izaak Walton League's Arlington-Fairfax chapter will begin circulating petitions "within several days" for a November 7 referendum on a $2,617,000 expansion of Arlington sewage treatment facilities.

Chapter President Carl P. Sanderhoff said yesterday that 1000 signatures are needed to set up the referendum. More than 150 chapter members will circulate petitions, he added.

Arlington currently is pumping about 50 percent of its sewage untreated into the Potomac River, county officials estimate.

Last month, the Arlington County Board agreed to petition for a similar referendum "within six months" after the State Water Control Board ordered it to move to eliminate stream pollution.

The league's petition aims to have the referendum held during the November general election, avoiding the expense of separate balloting later.

Balky Kidney Slows Shaw's Recovery

LUTON, England, Sept. 15 (AP). George Bernard Shaw's recovery from a fractured thigh bone suffered a setback today.

The 94-year-old playwright lost ground when complications developed in the form of a kidney ailment that frequently causes trouble following operations, on older people. Three specialists who examined him at the Luton and Dunstable Hospital expressed anxiety.

A midafternoon bulletin said Shaw was "less well today." It described his trouble as a "worsening of a long-standing difficulty with the rental outflow," or a misfunctioning of the kidneys.

Shaw is believed to have been troubled with the ailment for some time prior to last Sunday, when he fell and broke his left thigh. The bone ends were pinned together in an operation the following day.

Hospital authorities said Shaw's doctors fear the kidney condition may become aggravated and retard his recovery. The barb-tongued savant had been getting along fine before his kidneys turned against him. He got out of bed this morning for the third day in a row and swung his injured leg back and forth to exercise it.

City Heads May Merge Aid Laws

District Commissioners are considering legislation to merge the three acts under which the District Welfare Department now administers public assistance funds.

District Welfare Director Gerard M. Shea and his principal assistant, Raymond F. Clapp conferred with the Commissioners on the proposal yesterday.

There is now one act covering old age assistance, another for aid to the blind and a third for aid to dependent children, Clapp said. Each sets up different standards and requirements. For instance, a person can qualify for the general relief roles by having lived in the city for one year, Clapp said. But to be eligible for old-age assistance he must have lived here for five of the previous nine years.

Chief benefit to be derived from one act would be simplification, Clapp said. But it might also bring more Federal matching funds to the District. This would be true, for instance, if the bill should cut down residence requirements for old-age assistance, which is partly financed with Federal funds.

Gallery Plans Gulbenkian Art Exhibition

The National Gallery of Art will open an exhibition of the Gulbenkian collection of European paintings at 3 p. m. Sunday, October 8, David E. Finley, gallery director, announced yesterday.

The pictures to be shown have until recently been on exhibit at the National Gallery in London. They will be shown here for an indefinite period.

Among the artists represented are Dirk Bouts, Carpaccio, Rubens, Van Dyck, Rembrandt, Boucher, Fragonard, Gainsborough, Corot, Manet, Monet, Degas and Renoir. Many of the paintings were originally in leading European collections.

Graduation For Nurses Set for Sunday

Consecration was held last night and the baccalaureate will be held at 11 a. m. today at the church.

Dr. J. Wayne McFarland will deliver the principal commencement address. Barbara Chong Bo Nip is president of the class.

Crime Unit To Hear Russell Testify Tuesday

By The Associated Press

Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said yesterday the Senate Crime Investigating Committee has located Harry Russell, a missing witness, and will question him Tuesday in connection with its Florida and Chicago inquiries.

Kefauver said Russell was a member of the S. & G. syndicate which operated at Miami Beach, Fla.

"He was admitted to a one-sixth participation in this syndicate after a series of peculiar incidents which formed part of the committee's investigation at Miami and which were commented upon in its recent interim report," Kefauver said. "Among these incidents was the shutting off of the wire racing service to the S. & G. syndicate and the investigation of the S. & G. syndicate by a special investigator for the State of Florida.

Arlington Man Held In Numbers Raid

John W. Wilson, 44, 2130 S. Nelson st., Arlington, was charged by Arlington police with operating a lottery yesterday, following his arrest in a raid on a cleaning establishment where he was employed as a presser.

Wilson was taken in custody by Detective Russell Runyon and Police Pvts. Joseph Heath and William Dinsmore. He was later released in $500 bond for a hearing Monday in Arlington County Court. Police, who confiscated a "quantity" of alleged numbers slips and cash, said Wilson had been under surveillance for several weeks before a warrant was issued.

American U. Staff Breakfasts Today

Of Log and Brick

This unusual log and brick home is most attractive in its natural setting. It is located in nearby Fairfax County, Va., within 12 miles of the Pentagon over the fast Super Shirley hwy. Built a few years ago, it offers the finest in log construction. Rooms on upper level include exposed log rustic living room (26x20) with tremendous stone fireplace and door opening on screened porch (12x20), library (13x16), 3 large bedrooms and bath; on the lower level, rooms include den (16x20) with dark green walls and a charming large elevated white brick Swedish fireplace, pine-paneled dining room (12x16) with a quaint Dutch door, artistic wrought iron hinges and an interesting electrically wired old oil lamp; the large, sunny "country atmosphere" kitchen is most inviting, with its cheerful spatter linoleum floor and daffodil-yellow walls. To aid the housekeeper area, many cupboards, a large breakfast corner with wide window seat and up-to-the-minute electric range and refrigerator. Servants' bath, oil heat, storm windows. A most interesting feature is a one-room log guest house.

ACREAGE, SALE 75

MARYLAND

THIS IS TO TELL YOU about the perfect setting for a home, the most beautiful setting in this part of the United States. This setting is on River Road right opposite the entrance of the Congressional Country Club. We advertised this setting of this beautiful hill and the people didn't buy it, so I decided to build my own home on it. This home is now nearly completed. People stop on River Road by the dozens to look at this beautiful setting and this beautiful home. It's the sensation of Montgomery County. We expect to be living in this home in about a month. In a few days they will start to make a lawn, working with the sunshine and rain and fertilizer and lime, and you will see a lawn and a home and a setting that will thrill you as it does us every time we look at it. We also have a few more adjoining hills, one with 44 acres. You could divide it among a few of your friends. I also have other hills not quite so big. We'll sell you these homesites at what we paid for the property 22 years ago plus taxes and interest for 22 years. You can go out and pick out the site you like, then reach me at my home, WO. 0933, Fulton R. Gordon, owner. Brokers attention.

500 Acres—100 Acres Already Sold For Development

This acreage is located in the zone of the new South Capitol St. Bridge. This bridge is operating now with the capacity of 50,000 automobiles a day. This acreage is only about 12 min. to the White House. It will be the greatest traffic center around Washington, and where there's traffic centers there comes shopping centers, and to show you what developing the land will do to improve the value of the acreage, when I developed Chevy Chase, D. C., land that I paid $3000 an acre for in the shopping zone is now worth a million dollars an acre. There seems no reason why the same increased values should not prevail in this Southeast section. If you compare values with the shopping centers of the Virginia end of the bridges across the river, all of that today is worth a million dollars an acre. When I was bringing milk from Baileys Cross Roads and was a White House milk man, it seems to the best of my memory that the acreage was worth only a few hundred dollars an acre. You might wonder why I don't subdivide this ground. I am in my 84th year and this is a young man's job. Any young man who has the working capital of $50,000 cash and some experience as a subdivider could certainly handle this proposition. There are millions in subdividing this ground. You can reach me at my home, WO. 0933, Fulton R. Gordon, owner. Brokers' attention.

Used Car Bargains — — — NEVER GOOD VALUES — — — ALWAYS

We, at Al's Motors

are not going to try and outshout our competitors with flagrant claims such as Sacrifice Sales, Lifetime guarantees, 10% reductions, ridiculous terms, or no money down on postwar cars. We do not believe in it. There are good values and bad values in used cars and every dealer has both, and you pay for what you get which goes for both the car and the terms of payment.

The next time you consider the purchase of a used car by all means inspect our complete stock. We promise to treat you fairly and to give good value and to keep faith.

Philip Wright, Agriculture Chemist, Dies

Funeral Services for Philip Anson Wright, 63, Agriculture Department chemist and a resident of Washington for 37 years, will be held today at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek cemetery. Mr. Wright died Wednesday at his home, 215 Rock Creek Church rd. nw.

Mr. Wright was a former deacon of Calvary Baptist Church and taught a class in the church's Sunday School.

He was a member of the American Chemical Society, the Libanus Masonic Lodge in Bristol, Vt., and recently held the position of District president of the Middlebury College Alumni Association.

Besides his wife, whom he married in 1914, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Ellen Mary King, Portland, Oreg.; a sister, Mrs. Fannie W. Hunt, Bristol; and a brother, Spencer E. Wright, Springfield, Mass. A son, Philip C. Wright, was killed in Pasco, Wash., in 1942.

Presbyterian Official Dies in Road Crash

THERMOPOLIS, Wyo., Sept. 15 (AP).—Dr. William Barrow Pugh, 62, executive secretary of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, was killed today in an auto-truck collision. His position made him head of a church with more than two million communicants.

Only a few hours earlier the Philadelphian had addressed the Wyoming Synod of the Presbyterian church at Powell, Wyo.

Dr. Pugh, nationally known for his church work, received the Congressional Medal of Honor during World War II for his service as an Army chaplain.

The State highway patrol said he was a passenger in a southbound car driven by the Rev. Joseph Lininger of Cheyenne. The accident occurred 10 miles south of here.

Arthur Stringer Dies; Wrote 'Perils of Pauline'

MOUNTAIN LAKES, N. J., Sept. 15 (AP).—Arthur Stringer, 76, who wrote many early movie serial scripts, including the "Perils of Pauline," died yesterday.

Mr. Stringer produced more than 50 novels, a dozen books of poetry and many dramas and comedies.

22 Dead, 23 Missing In Japanese Typhoon

TOKYO, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The Japanese National Maritime Safety board today said a typhoon has sunk, damaged or washed away 87 vessels, most of them small craft.

The typhoon passed over the western coast of the island of Hokkaido at 9 a. m. It killed 23 persons. Twenty-two were missing and 33 were injured in the Kyushu, Shikoku and western Honshu areas.

Throngs Pay Final Tribute To Smuts

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—One of the greatest crowds every assembled in South Africa lined the streets today to bid farewell to Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, the great soldier-statesman, who died Monday at he age of 80.

Spitfire planes dipped their wings overhead, cannon boomed in salute and men and women stood weeping as the body of Smuts was taken first through the streets of Pretoria and then to a crematorium at Johannesburg.

The funeral service at Pretoria was attended by Smuts' political foe, Dr. D. F. Malan, who unseated the old soldier as prime minister; representatives of King George VI and other dignitaries.

Approximately 300,000 persons —white, black and Indian—lined the railway track to watch the funeral train depart.

At this end of the trip, grieving crowds stood 40 deep along the two-mile route to the crematorium from the station. His widow, who is not well, did not attend the services.

The Rev. J. J. Reyneke, at a funeral service in the Dutch Reformed Church in Pretoria, called for greater racial tolerance in South Africa, one of Smuts' political goals.

Wife Loses Plea On Charge She Stole From Spouse

BALTIMORE, Sept. 15 (AP).—In Maryland, a wife can be convicted of stealing from her husband.

Chief Judge W. Conwell Smith handed down that ruling in Criminal Court today in the case of Mrs. Audrey Delores Mohr, who is charged with larceny or embezzlement of $39,621 from her husband, Carl R. Mohr.

Judge Smith tossed out a plea for dismissal on the ground that under common law she couldn't steal from her husband. It would be like stealing from herself.

The common-law theory of unity of husband and wife, the jurist ruled, has been altered in Maryland by the Married Woman's Act of 1898.

Pointing out that this law authorized married women to engage in business as freely as unmarried, Judge Smith said:

"Freely to engage in business means freedom to act, but implies no immunity or freedom from responsibility for her acts . . ."

Mrs. Mohr is accused of taking the money while working in her husband's automobile business.

Waves Hit Boat; 6 Drown

BOGOTA, Colombia, Sept. 15 (AP).—The newspaper El Siglo reported today that waves overturned a boat carrying lumber and potatoes across Lake Guamues, near Pasto, causing six of the seven persons aboard to drown.

W. E. Dungan Dies; Former Policeman

Funeral services for W. Earl Dungan, 56, who combined a career as an auto dealer with 25 years of service on the police force, will be held at 2 p. m. Monday in the Ryan Funeral Home, 317 Pennsylvania ave. se.

Mr. Dungan, 642 Gallatin st. nw., died Thursday at Doctors Hospital after a two-week illness.

As a policeman, he served in Precincts No. 6, 11, and 13, both on foot and as a motorcycle man. He retired from the force two years ago after several years as traffic policeman at the Benning Elementary School, where youngsters nicknamed him "Pop."

He had been an auto dealer for about 30 years, formerly owning his own motor company at 5800 Georgia ave. He joined the Potomac Motor Sales, Inc., two years ago.

Born in Northumberland County, Va., Mr. Dungan came to Washington in 1917. Active in the Petworth Baptist Church, he sang in its choir and taught a Sunday school class.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Muriel G. Dungan; a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Brown of 641 Gallatin st. nw., two grandchildren, William and Barbara Brown, and two brothers and three ssiters.

Jonas Greene, Former D. C. Policeman, Dies

Funeral services for Jonas Willard Greene, 70, a retired Metropolitan Police sergeant who died Thursday at Washington Sanitarium as a result of a heart attack, will be held at 2 p. m. Sunday at the S. H. Hines funeral chapel, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Manassas, Va., of which he was a native.

Mr. Greene, who lived at 2540 14th st. nw., served 23 years on the police force before retiring a quarter century ago. He was commended several times for his work on murder cases.

He was a cousin of the late Melvin C. Hazen, a District Commissioner from 1933 until his death in 1940.

Mr. Greene is survived by his wife, Mrs. Catherine Marine Greene; a daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Sangster, Ashton, Md.; and two sons, Jones Willard Greene, jr., 1336 Michigan ave. ne., and Eugene Willard Greene, 4345 Lilypons dr. ne.

Even the Very Young Can Benefit

Special Schools Can Aid Deaf

(This is the last in a series of six articles describing recent medical progress in the treatment of deafness and blindness. The series was read and approved by Dr. Marvin Fisher Jones, surgical director of the department of otolaryngology, Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, and Fred Heffinger, superintendent of that hospital.)

By Kay Barrington

CHAPTER SIX

It is hard to believe that parents would deprive their child of a chance to lead a normal life. But tragically, thousands of parents are doing just that. They are the fathers and mothers of children who are deaf or hard of hearing.

Every year, these seriously handicapped children are entered in public schools. And every year the cost of keeping these pupils in lower grades as their schoolmates are promoted exceeds 20 million dollars.

For the severely deafened child, a special school is the only answer. Here he will cover the same subjects as his more fortunate schoolmates, but his progress will be slower. Because of the extra time used for speech and voice training and lip reading, it will take him about 15 years to complete the work that children with normal hearing would finish in 12.

There are special day schools for hard-of-hearing children in every State, as well as 85 residential schools and 20 private schools.

When the doctor told Mrs. Brown that he could do nothing to make her 2-year-old hear, she was frantic. Would her baby grow up in a world of silence, unable to speak or hear? Surely someone, somewhere could do something.

Finally, a social worker told her about New York's Public School 47, one of the special schools for the deaf.

"But she's only 2 years old," Mrs. Brown protested. "It would be cruel to send her there."

After much persuasion, she agreed to visit P. S. 47 to see what its staff was doing for deafened children. She found a bright, cheerfully decorated building bursting with children of all ages. Like all youngsters, they were noisy, friendly and full of life.

Tiny tots played with gay-colored toys. Ten-year-olds were reiting history lessons and 'teenagers were engaged in all the ordinary pursuits of junior high school students. The only difference—most of them wore hearing aids.

To Mrs. Brown's surprise, she saw dozens of tots in the 2-to-6-year bracket. It was both amusing and heartbreaking to see these toddling infants, each with a hearing aid strapped to his chest.

"You won't know your child in a year," one of the school staff told her. "We teach children to speak who have never heard a sound—quite naturally, too. Of course, when you speak to them, they read your lips."

Mrs. Brown saw a 9-year-old boy who had never been able to pick up any sounds but a loud gong and a shrill whistle. The teacher asked a question and he answered promptly. His clear enunciation amazed Mrs. Brown.

A more tragic case was that of a little girl who had not entered the school until she was 10. Now, a year and a half later, her teacher was getting the first response from her. At first the child was so timid and frightened she withdrew from the rest of the children. A school psychiatrist worked with her and found she was seriously maladjusted.

The years of silence had taken their toll. Individual teaching methods were used and at last they are beginning to show results.

Mrs. Brown enrolled her little girl, and now she is one of the staunchest supporters of special schools for the deaf. Her child is completely normal, well adjusted and happy.

Any child whose hearing loss is greater than 20 percent in his better ear should wear a hearing aid to preserve the hearing that is left, for hearing deteriorates if it is not used.

Among the many fine schools for the deaf are the Central Institute, St. Louis; the John Tracy Clinic, Los Angeles; the Martin School for the Deaf, Philadelphia; the Gough School, San Francisco; the Clark School, Northrup, Mass.; the Alexander Graham Bell School for the Deaf, Chicago and Cleveland.

'Mr. and Mrs. North'

After All, Murder Is Just a Sideline

By Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg

IN BOOKS, ON STAGE, in movies and radio, and soon in television, Pam and Jerry North are a fictional but familiar husband and wife team, to whom no murder mystery is long mysterious. Their continuing exploits are the product of another husband and wife team, Richard and Frances Lockridge, one-time reporters who met in Kansas City. Says Dick:

Lockridge

"The morning of a murder at our home in Connecticut is no different than any other morning. Our hybrid Siamese cats, Gin, Sherry and Martini, prowl or play—the maid busies herself with housework—and Frances digs happily in the garden—while the blood of our victim drips from my typewriter keys."

The whole idea of murder mysteries first sprouted in Fran's garden: "You see, Rex Stout used to be one of our neighbors back in the early '30s when Dick was still a poor drama critic on the New York Sun, and I was always raving about Rex's beautiful flowers."

"As soon as I discovered that his detective, Nero Wolfe, was supporting a greenhouse full of orchids and rare iris, costing $12 a plant, I developed an intense interest and respect for mystery writers' royalties," said Dick. "Not long after, I sold the first Mr. and Mrs. North story to The New Yorker magazine."

"I TURN OUT my daily 1500 words between the hours of 11 and 1, so that during the summer, I frequently spend the afternoons gardening with Frances." Dick smiled and added: "After all, murder is just a sideline with us."

A very profitable sideline—17 Lockridge mysteries have sold four million copies.

Without children themselves, the Lockridges have never permitted Pam North to do more than baby-sit with friends' children: "We can't find any room for a nursery in a story about the Norths—what good is a baby in a mystery?" asked Dick. "But our favorite characters, cats, are different—intelligent, clean, friendly, civilized, they can leave alone or discover clues that lead to the murderer."

AS REPORTERS, married, but working for rival papers in Kansas City, the Lockridges matched their skill against each other: "We both covered the same tragic shooting of a young girl by an 8-year-old boy who had stumbled across his father's pistol. I wrote it up straight," Frances remembers, "and I got a byline, but on the sixteenth page.

"But Dick wrote a lead featuring the judge's warning to all parents who leave firearms lying about the house—and his story got the lead spot in the next edition of the Kansas City Star!"

As victims, their only contact with crime came a few years ago when a thief broke into their New York apartment and stole Dick's typewriter. We wondered—what would happen if the Lockridges should find a body in their bathtub, how long would it take them to trap the murderer? Dick Lockridge almost dropped his martini in amazement: "Us?" Search for clues—track down the murderer? I should say not! The day Fran finds a corpse in our home, she'll do the only sensible thing—CALL THE POLICE."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Here's One Guy Who'll Win No Prize

Capital Transit recently completed a letter-writing contest in which Washingtonians were asked to write 100 words on the subject of "What transit progress means to me."

Mrs. J. W. F. of 2013 New Hampshire ave. nw. overheard one non-contestant grouch:

"To me it means that I used to save a dime when I walked, and now I save 15 cents."

STREET SCENE

Col. John P. Merrill of 525 Maple Ridge rd., Bethesda, Md., noted a stalled car on Key Bridge the other afternoon, and a motorcycle cop pulling up ominously behind it.

What happened next is a real tribute to our District policemen. The officer rolled up his sleeves and personally changed the motorist's tire.

The driver was no glamor girl (she was a matron with a small child in her arms) and the car bore a nondescript license number, and gave no evidence of belonging to any bigshot.

"I wish I could have stopped to get that policeman's badge number," sighs Colonel Merrill. "He must be a pretty nice guy."

Most people are, colonel. The trouble is that too many of us don't take the time to work at it.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Small, black short-haired 6-month-old pup, loves children." (Temple 7690.)

"Four housebroken 8-week-old kittens." (Wisconsin 6622.)

"Two gentle, friendly kittens." (Hobart 7543.)

"Handsome black 2-year-old cat desperately needs home today." (Michigan 4007.)

"Mother cat and four healthy 7-week-old kittens." (Rockville 4611.)

"Very gentle 10-month-old fox terrier." (Appleton 1296.)

"Eleven-month-old dog, mostly fox terrier, good with children." (Falls Church 6451 between 9 a. m. and 2 p. m., school days only.)

"Gentle mother cat and four 5-week-old kittens, 'orphaned' by Navy master called to duty." (Taylor 0845.)

"Year-old black cat with four white gloves, white vest and white whiskers." (Chestnut 3154.)

SHADES OF CLARA BOW!

Mrs. Richard H. Adams of 1002 10th st., Alexandria, Va., suggests a good motto for our diet expert, Ida Jean Kain:

"You can't eat your cake and have 'it' too."

SOME SECOND THOUGHTS OF SCARE BUYING

One nice thing about living in an apartment and not having much storage space is that one isn't as tempted to make a fool of himself by hoarding 100-lb. sacks of sugar and such.

THIS IS WASHINGTON?

My authority for this incident is a well-known local doctor (who avoids personal publicity for professional reasons).

It was a rainy night. Several cars were double-parked on Connecticut ave., between Ordway and Porter sts. nw.

A girl came out of a nearby doorway and got into her car at the curb. Seeing that she wanted to drive off, a young Latin whose car bore diplomatic tags noted that his own auto and the one double-parked behind him were blocking the way.

He beeped his horn lightly, as a signal to the other double-parked drivers. But from the car behind came an infuriated roar.

"So, you think because you've got diplomatic tags you're going to back into me, huh? Well, I'll show you, mister. You don't pull that stuff on an American."

And with that he locked up his car and stalked off into the rain.

Several witnesses to the scene tried to apologize for the loudmouth's behavior. Even the girl whose car was now hopelessly blocked against the curb tried to explain that he wasn't very typical of Americans.

But the dazed Latin didn't seem to get it. He mumbled his thanks and drove off in utter confusion.

HOME REMEDY

As you've no doubt read, Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux's annual mass baptismal service will be held at Griffith Stadium tomorrow.

For the occasion, Elder Michaux has imported a cargo of water from the River Jordan. The other day, Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, president of the National Medical Association, presented a bottle of the water to Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing.

"When the burdens of fighting the battle of socialized medicine become heavy," he counseled, "take a few drops of water from the bottle and anoint your head."

The harried Mr. Ewing opened the bottle forthwith, and put a few drops of water on his forehead.

'TIS TRUE, 'TIS PITY

The current issue of Post Haste, the postal magazine, mourns.

"One way to meet expenses these days is just to turn in any direction."

SHORTER HANGOVER

'Tis love that makes the world go 'round,
But some, who stay aloof,
Prefer to get the same effect
From Scotch of doubtful proof.

Gen. Marshall Seen Key to Unity

By Drew Pearson

The two most important facts regarding General Marshall's appointment as Secretary of Defense are:

1. There will be complete unity between the State Department and National Defense instead of the recent bickering; for Marshall is a warm friend and 100 percent supporter of Dean Acheson. When Marshall became Secretary of State the chief request he made was that Acheson remain as Undersecretary. It was also Acheson who really drew up the Marshall Plan and wrote the famous speech which Marshall gave at Harvard.

Gen. Marshall

2. The United States will now concentrate chiefly on Europe, and after the Korean war, try, as far as possible, to keep out of the Orient. This was General Marshall's idea when he was Ambassador to China, and it was he who set this policy later as Secretary of State. Acheson, although agreeing with the policy, inherited it from him.

As a Civilian—General Marshall has been described as a civilian-minded military man, which is probably true. He has not always been so, however . . . In the winter of 1944, he let out a terriffic blast against labor unions, accusing them of delaying the war, though actually labor had a good war record. . . . On the other hand, it was Marshall, when Secretary of State, who advised Truman that a veto of the Taft-Hartley Act would win friends for us on the labor-minded continent of Europe. . . . Latin-American governments remember the blunt, military-minded directives issued by Marshall, then Chief of Staff, to secure bases at Natal, Brazil, and in the Galapagos Islands off Ecuador, after Pearl Harbor, regardless of what Latin-American wishes might be. Fortunately the State Department toned down Marshall's high-handedness.

Marshall and Truman—President Truman has always worshiped George Marshall, some friends describing it as respect which a field artillery captain holds for the top general of the Army. The feeling goes deeper than respect, however, and is nearer hero worship.

Marshall also did Truman a great favor when he induced General Eisenhower to retire from the presidential race in 1948. Marshall and Ike not only are warm friends, but Marshall had figuratively held Ike's hand when he had some domestic problems during the war . . . All three men, incidentally — Truman, Marshall and Eisenhower—have a strong dislike for General MacArthur.

Marshall's Politics—It is barely possible that General Marshall might not be where he is today had it not been for the fact that his father was a Democrat during the Republican administration of William McKinley. Because he was a Democrat, Marshall's father, a resident of Uniontown, Pa., could not get his son into West Point, so the boy went to Virginia Military Institute instead. Later, General "Pa" Watson, FDR's military aide and a stanch Virginian, had much to do with having Marshall, an adopted Virginian, made Chief of Staff . . . During World War I, Marshall served under Pershing and became a member of the so-called Pershing clique which dominated the War Department for years . . . Though Marshall has never seen combat, Pershing gave him credit for planning the maneuver by which United States troops were moved from the St. Mihiel to the Meuse-Argonne front with no enemy aviator discovering it.

Marshall's Mistakes—Because of his personal popularity, the newspapers have been kind to Marshall. Little has been published about his mistakes, of which the most criticized was failure to warn Pearl Harbor in 1941—except by a slow commercial cable which arrived too late—that the Japs might attack on December 7. . . . It is not generally known also that in 1940 when the French and British had their backs to the wall, Marshall opposed sending United States rifles to them. He was overruled by FDR. . . . Other Marshall mistakes were to predict Moscow would fall six weeks after the Nazis invaded Russia; to announce a week before Japan surrendered that we would need an eight-million-man land army to take Japan; and to ask for only six flying fortresses in 1940.

Methods of Work—General Marshall, now 70 years old, has followed a strict routine most of his life. It seldom varies. He is up at 6:30 for a horseback ride, and was riding his horse Prepare, when aides tried to find him a few hours before Pearl Harbor. . . . During the war he was at his desk by 7:45, came home to Fort Myer for lunch and always stretched out for a siesta after lunch. . . . As Secretary of State, Marshall took life easier. He was not a well man, had a kidney removed, and spent several days at a time at his home in Leesburg, Va.

Marshall in China—While Ambassador to China, Marshall once spent an evening with Bob Hannegan, at which the general reviewed his own life. "I learned a lot in the Philippines," he told Hannegan. "I learned that the worst civilian rule is preferable to the best military rule."
